CARMEL UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT students—such as these at Middle School—who use buses to get to and from school may be charged a fee next fall for the service because of a budget deficit facing the district. Carmel trustees must trim $500,000-$700,000 from the budget. Charging for the cost of bus service would save an estimated $165,000. Story on p 13.

Farr argues in favor of development:

Supervisors turn down Ranch appeal

CARMEL VALLEY RANCH developers can proceed with residential construction on the project without proving an independent source of water exists to serve homes there, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors decided Tuesday.

On a 4-1 vote, the board rejected an appeal challenging the use permit issued in January for the first 140-unit condominium phase of the project east of the Mid Valley Shopping Center. More than 200 people crowded the supervisors' chambers to standing-room only capacity to participate in the hearing.

Also thrown out by the board were appeals asking that the sewage treatment system for the project be designed in detail now, and that an agreement to improve roads serving the subdivision be signed before the use permit is issued.

Only a court ruling could overrule that decision.

Board Chairman Sam Farr of Carmel argued forcefully against the appeal and was supported by Supervisors Michal Moore, Barbara Shipnuck and Kenneth Blohm.

Supervisor Dusan Petrovic was the lone board member to side with the appellants, the City of Carmel, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the Carmel Area Coalition.

Farr said all the concerns raised in the appeal were dealt with adequately by the planning commission in the more than 70 conditions attached to the use permit.

And he maintained, as he has since the Specific Plan for the project was first approved in December 1976, that Carmel Valley Ranch is the benchmark by which all other projects will be measured.

"We have set a standard for development in Carmel Valley that is unmatched in Monterey County, perhaps even in the state of California," Farr said before the vote. "We can scare away anyone who thinks they can develop at any less quality."

WHILE THE APPEAL of the use permit dealt with traffic, sewage and water, the water issue was the cornerstone of opposition to the project.

And the key to the water issue was whether the development could be supplied by California-American Water Co. from the Carmel Valley aquifer or whether the new, unproven Tularcitos aquifer would be the only source for the project.

Glen Chang of the CVPOA said the new aquifer "has been used as a blue chip in negotiations" for approval of the Carmel Valley Ranch concept.

"It was dangled like a carrot in front of a donkey's nose in every one of the many presentations and hearings," she told the supervisors.

And, she said, language in the Specific Plan approved for the project in December 1976 supports the contention that the aquifer must be proven before any residential development is allowed.

Mrs. Shipnuck agreed that discussion before the board when the plan was adopted supports the appeal.

But, she added, that discussion never found its way into the Specific Plan.

"The documents do not bear that up," she said.

The plan allows for either a private water company using Tularcitos aquifer water or Cal-Am supplies.

"As much as I'm sympathetic over the water concern, I find myself in the position of voting one way when I would rather vote the other," she said. "Cal-Am water is available."

Attorney Myron Etienne Jr., representing the Landmark Lands Co. development firm of Oklahoma, said the either-or condition about water supply was always in the plan, unchallenged.

"The plan was never amended to take this out," he said, "We've relied on it all the way through."

He said tape discussions which emphasize the Tularcitos aquifer must be considered in light of the fact that they took place in the middle of a severe drought when Cal-Am was banned from making new water connections.

Mrs. Shipnuck said she was "very sorry" that point had not been made on the record during the December 1976 discussions.

"Had that been on the tape, we would be in a clear position," she said.

Farr said allowing the development to tie into Cal-Am is part of consistent board policy to discourage private well drilling in the Carmel Valley aquifer.

Water use for a project using a public utility can be controlled more readily than one whose water supply comes from a private water company, he added.

IN CHALLENGING the project on the road issue, the appellants argued that a signed agreement to help pay for widening Carmel Valley Road to four lanes and completely finance reconstruction of the Robinson Canyon Road-Carmel Valley Road intersection is needed before the use permit for the condominiums can be issued.

Etienne countered, with the backing of Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos, that the agreement will be completed later this year, before the final subdivision map for the first phase is approved by the supervisors.

Mrs. Shipnuck won passage for a new condition which requires construction to begin on the intersection after the first two-year construction phase.

The sewage treatment plan, which involves using treated wastewater to irrigate the golf course, was challenged by hydrologist John Logan.

Logan said irrigating above the Carmel Valley aquifer would raise the spectre of polluting the Monterey Peninsula's main water supply. He contended that there is inadequate storage for treated wastewater in lakes on the golf course and that viruses in the water could seep from the golf course fairways into the water table below.

The ranch development and proposed treatment plant are in an area surrounded by Cal-Am wells, Logan said.

From one Cal-Am well, he said, "Even with my arthritis, I can stand and throw a rock where the developer plans to irrigate with wastewater."

But Farr said the system must be approved by both county and state health authorities before the development can proceed.

"Frankly, I turn to the technical staff," Farr said. "They have assured me the condition in the Specific Plan will protect the public health, safety and welfare."

Betty Davis of the Sierra Club argued earlier in the meeting that "these assurances sound good, but what has actually happened?"

Past conditions on preserving vegetation along the Carmel River, limiting dust during grading operations and avoiding silt flow into the river all were violated, she said.

"It is difficult to have confidence that far more major conditions will be met," she said.

Disputes report

Dear Editor:

My further response to the so-called expert who delivered up the CH2M Hill Co. report paid for by California-American Water Co. is that he couldn't pour water out of a boot with the directions on the heel.

That the report has critics because the conclusions are not what we want to hear, you're darn tootin', 'cause what we want to hear is the truth.

Since I was specifically named in your article regarding this amazing report, I feel I am entitled to a specific response without rehashing all I said about it last summer.

William O'Leary, this expert, pretends to know a helluva lot about a sand and gravel operation that he never once talked to the owners about! If, as he claims, the riverbed has been dropping at a rate of three inches a year because of the dams and Valley Rock extractions, then over the 50-year span that Valley Rock has been in operation, the riverbed must have dropped 12½ feet! It doesn't take a genius to know that this claim is hogwash. At what specific spots in the riverbed did O'Leary determine that it is dropping three inches a year?

Let's analyze this claim. In order to lower a riverbed 20 miles long and 50 feet wide to an average depth of 3 inches would require an extraction of 48,888 cubic yards of material each year. Now if O'Leary would like to buy me out based on his figures, he will find me to be a very happy seller indeed. Unfortunately, his figures are preposterous.

The winter floods of 1969 and 1978 eroded millions of tons of riverbanks. How come all that sediment didn't build the riverbed back up?

Another point. If the drought killed the trees then they would be dead uniformly along the entire length of the river, not just in proximity to Cal-Am wells. The truth is they are dying only in close proximity to those wells and they started dying when those wells were put in years before the drought. Ask those who live along the river, not Mr. O'Leary from San Francisco.

O'Leary is full of contradictions. First he says vegetation is ineffective to stop erosion and in the next breath: "This is not to say that trees on the bank don't help. They have been effective (emphasis mine) and still are."

Asked what happened to the sediment he claimed was trapped behind San Clemente Dam, O'Leary couldn't say. Some expert. But since the loss of all that sediment trapped by the dams has in the past contributed to the erosion, he has a ready solution: build a larger dam. Simply fantastic!

In conclusion, I will be most happy to instruct Mr. O'Leary as to another way he can get water out of his boot: stand on his head!

Parking isn't the problem

Dear Editor:

This is with regard to your editorial about restaurants in the Pine Cone of February 15:

I do not think that lack of parking in Carmel should be made the scapegoat for slow business in general in town; but I shall write only about the restaurant business because I eat out a lot and know more about it. My husband was in that business on the Peninsula for 22 years and was successful. Here are the reasons why I think some restaurants may not be doing too well:

1. There are too many restaurants—and art galleries and gift shops and real estate offices.

2. Some people go into the restaurant business not knowing very much about it and not being able to figure how much gross they have to take in in order to pay for the business and the high rents prevailing in Carmel.

3. Some people think running a restaurant is an easy way to make money. It is not; it is one of the hardest ways. Good help is hard to find and keep, and if the owner or owners are not working, too, the business is even more difficult.

4. Some of the restaurants in Carmel are in out-of-the-way locations and lack foot traffic. They are in places my husband wouldn't have touched, much less would he have put a lot of money into buying one of them and paying the high rents asked.

5. Many of the menus are very ordinary and too much alike, showing little imagination on the part of the owners, yet prices are uniformly high. Also the quality of some of the food does not warrant the prices charged. Some owners may not even know what prices they should charge based on costs of food.

6. Frequently people are forced to buy and pay for more food than they really want. Are there any places left where one can buy just a plain ham, cheese, tuna or what-have-you sandwich without getting and having to pay for things like lettuce leaf, one slice of tomato and/or onion, potatoes in some form, etc.?

7. Prices are getting so out of hand and going up so fast that many people who like to eat out are having to cut down on the number of times they do so, or cut it out entirely. Without local patronage a restaurant can't make it, and many people here are on fixed incomes.

The situation may be getting to the survival of the fittest. Too bad, but that's the way things usually work.

Back to parking: I am downtown six days a week and don't have a parking problem. I usually park near Sunset Center and walk. I believe there is more of a walking problem than a parking problem—many people don't want to. Some, of course, can't and places like the Barnyard may be for them; but others should walk more and Carmel is a great place for doing that.

Point was missed

Dear Editor:

With reference to your editorial in the Feb. 15, 1979 issue of the Pine Cone, as it relates to restaurants in Carmel, the most important point of all is being missed.

That is, restaurants do not have to worry about parking, patronage, competition from adjoining businesses or ancillary verbal tactics to justify economic stability or downfall when all that is required is they serve excellent food; as far as I am concerned most of those mentioned in your editorial were not good food establishments to begin with and therefore deserve their fate.

Would like to be buried here

Dear Editor:

Please thank Sharron L. Hale for pointing out the obvious inaccuracy about Moira Wallace (Courvoisier)'s birth. I am happy that my letter evoked interest in the Grant Wallace family which was so much part of the early artist colony of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Incidentally, was it a coincidence that the Feb. 22 issue of the Carmel Pine Cone (containing Miss Hale's letter) ran an excellent photograph of the Grant Wallace house on page 10? And it is captioned "The Doll House" (poor Kevin!).

I did not know either Moira or Kevin and the facts in the obituary-letter which I wrote were culled from my clipping file of early Monterey Peninsula history. I enclose xeroxed copies for Miss Hale. It is obvious that the mistake goes back to an article in the magazine California Arts and Architecture of October 1932, which stated that "The first born among the artist colony of Carmel, Miss Moira Wallace ..." (italics mine). This is probably accurate, in the sense of the Franklin Walker (The Seacoast of Bohemia)-Herbert Kerwin (In Search of Something) artist colony.

However, information was badly mangled in an article in Celebrated Artists of the Carmel-Monterey Colony (published by The Western Woman, Los Angeles, issued in both 1947 and 1948) which said, "Moira Wallace claims the distinction of being the

THE PEOPLE LOST another round in the battle to save Carmel Valley, but the fight will surely continue.

An overflow crowd listened in horror as our own supervisor, Sam Farr of Carmel, explained, justified and acted as the chief advocate for the developers from Oklahoma who want to build 500 houses and a 100-room hotel on the Carmel Valley Ranch property at Mid-Valley.

By use of twisted logic, Sam said the developers would not have to prove the existence of a separate water supply—the now infamous Tularcitos Aquifer—even though the transcripts of tapes of hearings by the supervisors clearly state that Landmark Lands Company would have to do so.

Since the decisions made by the supervisors got into print in a somewhat different version, in the final draft of the Specific Plan, the board, with the lone exception of Dusan Petrovic of King City, decided the developers could use Cal-Am water.

The logic is so cockeyed that any judge in a court of law would have to agree that it was a strange interpretation.

The bitterest pill for the people of Carmel and Carmel Valley to swallow was the arrogant manner in which Sam conducted the meeting. As chairman of the board, he showed obvious favoritism to the developers from Oklahoma. He frequently chastised speakers for not adhering to the narrow confines of the appeal.

Maybe he was stung by the avalanche of criticism he has been subjected to. Maybe he feels cut off from his constituents. Maybe he thinks he doesn't need us any more.

The toughest part of the whole melodrama is that most people don't have any explanation at all for the way Sam has been behaving.

I hope the Carmel Valley Property Owners Assn., the Carmel Area Coalition and the City of Carmel will continue their opposition to the huge development. I'm guessing the ultimate decision will be made in a court of law. When all the evidence is examined dispassionately, I think there are going to be some red faces in Salinas.

How to save school $$$

Dear Editor:

It was with great concern that I heard the deliberations at the last meeting of the Carmel Unified School District Board on Feb. 20. Indications are that savings are to be achieved by cutting educational programs, eliminating teacher positions, and eliminating busing or charging parents for busing.

I feel that the superintendent and school board often forget that the purpose of the public school is the education of young people to serve in a democracy. I urge that the superintendent and board study other means of cutting expenses if such becomes necessary.

I would like to suggest that the following savings are feasible and should be studied seriously:

1. Selling some of the vacant land owned by the school district.

2. Closing of the small Woods and Carmelo schools and placing those students and teachers in large River and Tularcitos schools. The facilities at Carmelo and Woods could be rented out for other uses.

3. Eliminating the position of assistant superintendent. The salary savings involved would be equal to at least two full-time teacher positions.

If educational programs, teachers, and busing are eliminated without serious consideration and possible action on the above suggestions, I feel the Carmel school board and superintendent will lose all credibility with the taxpayers, residents, voters, teachers and above all, the pupils in the Carmel Unified School District.

Should have said 'grossed'

Dear Editor:

In Mr. Horovitz's survey article on the state of cultural activities in Carmel, he stated, quoting me, that the Monterey County Symphony concerts in Sunset Center in Carmel netted $26,000. This should have been "grossed."

Mounting the six subscription concerts in Carmel cost the Symphony Association about $63,000 to $64,000, so that, given ticket sales of $26,000, we have to find another $37,000 or $38,000 in order to operate in Carmel.

Off-limits to Oklahomans?

Dear Editor:

It took almost a century to develop the most beautiful section of California coast—Carmel. It is barely able to cope with existing influx of visitors. If, and this is impossible I know, a law could be passed AND ENFORCED making Carmel off limits to all residents and visitors to that Oklahoma Carmel Valley Ranch population, proceed. Otherwise, tell the Oklahomans to develop their own sea paradise. We want to keep ours!

The Oklahomans would be paying 10 cents for many hundreds of dollars in rare environment per acre. My advice is stop all communications with them.

Resident parking 'disastrous'

Resident Permit Parking Committee
c/o Carmel Planning Commission
P.O. Box 21
Carmel, Calif. 93921

Dear Committee Members:

First of all, the members of your committee and those that have assisted you in distributing the prepaid postage survey cards deserve a great deal of credit and appreciation for your efforts. However, the Board of Directors of the Carmel Citizens Committee is of the opinion that any attempt to create a special resident permit parking program in either the residential neighborhoods or business district will prove to be disastrous.

The basic problem facing the City of Carmel is an inadequate number of parking spaces within the business district. Any plan designed to allow residents to park twice as long in any given parking space presently posted would, in our opinion, produce the following results:

1. It would reduce the turnover of available parking spaces, thereby creating an even worse parking problem.
2. It would encourage the merchants to park more often within the business district.
3. It would probably require the hiring of additional police personnel to issue and enforce the permits.
4. It would force more local residents to shop elsewhere if they can't locate a parking space.

We believe a preferential parking permit for residential neighborhoods would create the following shortcomings:

1. It would force shoppers and merchants alike to park further out in the residential areas.
2. It would be costly to enforce and administer.
3. It would require the posting of unsightly signs in the residential areas warning of the ordinance.

The Resident Permit Parking Committee should address itself to the issue of creating more, not less, parking spaces. As some possible answers, the Board of Directors of the Carmel Citizens Committee offers the following solutions in order to alleviate the present parking problem:

1. Increase the number of 20-minute parking spaces.
2. Reduce the number of 2-hour parking spaces.
3. Encourage local residents to shop between the hours of 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. by having the merchants offer some form of early morning discount, such as a price reduction of 1 to 5 percent.
4. Promote the Monterey Peninsula Transit buses by encouraging businesses to offer either validation or refund of bus fares.
5. Spend (invest) the in-lieu parking fee funds ($169,480) for real property surrounding the business district which would be suitable for public parking.

6. Give consideration to establishing a double-level parking facility at the south end of Sunset Center in place of the wooden structures.

7. Study the feasibility of acquiring land at either the mouth of the Carmel Valley or east of Highway 1 and Carpenter Street for tourists' parking, and linking the parking areas with the business district via Monterey Peninsula Transit service.

We hope the Resident Permit Parking Committee will consider the above suggestions when coming to grips with the persistent parking problem.

Applauded editorial, but...

Dear Editor:

I was certainly heartened by your efforts in the Feb. 22 edition of the Pine Cone to blow the whistle on the Carmel Valley Ranch developers. Your open letter to Sam Farr contained sentiments that I had long given up hope to see expressed editorially in your publication.

When you ask, "Why should we subordinate the welfare of the people who live here for the economic gain of a bunch of out-of-towners who are only interested in making a fast buck?" I find it hard to believe that I am reading Al Eisner's words.

Your statement in the Feb. 1 Pine Cone assailing the mayor of Carmel and the planning commissioners for their efforts to "Save Carmel and place the interests of the residents above that of the business community" are, I submit, much more typical of your stand in such matters.

Could it be, I wonder, that the explanation for your turnabout lies in the fact that you are a resident of Carmel Valley and not a voting resident of Carmel-by-the-Sea, and that you are only concerned about protecting residents from commercial interests when the enterprise is on your own doorstep?

As Martin Luther put it, "It makes a difference whose ox is gored."

Boyd deserves commendation

Dear Editor:

Bruce Horowitz's recent story on the purse snatching incident in Carmel was so interesting and exciting I almost regret writing in with the facts. Still, the fact is that the person truly deserving commendation went unmentioned.

Tom Boyd, a Carmel resident, observed the purse snatch, headed off the assailant and shouted to me to continue pursuit, which I did. I didn't hear Mrs. Morgan's scream and was oblivious to the goings-on until shouted to by Tom while I was coming out of my house.

Also, of course, credit goes to the Carmel police who responded very quickly and investigated and made a quick arrest.

May I say too that I am afraid that my speech is a good deal less colorful and littered with slang than indicated in Bruce's interpretation, and the Speedy Hauling Service is basically a heavy gardening and brush clearance service rather than a trash collection agency.

I would like to thank the several local merchants who phoned me with offers of running shoes. I do have a pair. Perhaps they might be donated to Horowitz to help him in "running down the news."

Pedicabs boggle mind

Dear Editor:

Pedicabs in Carmel! It boggles the mind. I have lived here 23 years and have watched changes and contained my blood pressure by realizing the existence of the law of increasing complexity and that almost everyone is trying to make a dollar in this world, and that's that.

Is it not absolutely fantastic and overwhelming how much gullibility there is in all of us? Is Mr. Slimp serious in comparing the narrow hillside streets of Carmel to Honolulu? Mr. Slimp will probably get his project—money buys; but the private enterprise system will let him go broke. If experience is the only way some humans learn discretion, consideration, and good judgment with their money, better than hankering.

A lot of automobiles will be greatly inconvenienced for a couple of years trying to maneuver around, and maybe a cab or two may get nicked in the fender and there will be a lawsuit here and there; but that's the learning experience, isn't it?

Pedicabs in Carmel! Fantastic!

Gwen answers Ben again

Dear Ben:

Re: Your column dated Feb. 15, 1979.

You wrote: "No one reported that they tried to sweep their dirt under the rug—tried to pretend it never happened—by deleting from the minutes of the preceding meeting that portion which pertained to the ruckus about Mr. Collins."

For your information, friend Ben, this was a simple matter of correct parliamentary procedure. The following is a direct quote from Roberts Rules of Order, published November 1976 by Pyramid Publications, Inc., page 40, "Withdrawal of a Motion."

"When a question is before the assembly and the mover wishes to withdraw or modify it, or substitute a different one in its place, if no one objects, the presiding officer grants the permission, if any objection is made, it will be necessary to obtain leave to withdraw, etc., on a motion for that purpose. This motion cannot be debated or amended. When a motion is withdrawn, the effect is the same as if it had never been made."

This action was neither smart nor shrewd, just accurate. And so it is on "The Other Side of the Grapevine Fence."

Seeks support for theater

Dear Editor:

I'm sure I speak for countless Peninsulans in thanking you for such generous use of Pine Cone space for support of the Arts in general but theater in particular.

There must be many, many reasons why theater groups have started, tried and failed in the last 30 years in Carmel but I refuse to believe it is because there is not a potential audience! Theater traditionally has a far greater following than symphony or opera or specialized music groups.

Here are some comparisons from my home town, Memphis. Our symphony subscription runs about 2,500. Opera Memphis, with lavish productions and international stars attracts an audience of that same size for each of their four presentations each year. Our Community Theatre opened its 1968-69 season with Camelot, which drew an audience of 18,000 people for 40 sold-out performances. That was more people than had ever attended any cultural event, local or imported, in the history of Memphis!

Fifteen years ago that theater was housed in the swimming pool of the Clarence Saunders mansion (the Piggly Wiggly man) and had a subscription of 900 members. They were also temporarily without a director. After a season of guest directors they settled on one, and he and his wife were hired as the only full-time staff. Today that theater is enjoying its third year in a splendid new plant, that director has a staff of 15 and the membership stands at 8,500. Hard ticket for Camelot was $6, but the subscription ticket price averages out to $3.33 for a six-show season.

Now, if national averages are correct, there should be a potential audience of at least 2,000 on this Peninsula. That's not counting theater-going guests from Salinas and beyond. The audience is out there but they must be wooed.

It's my conviction that they want to see quality productions in a pleasing ambiance at a realistic ticket price. It takes time and effort to build a subscription audience. It also takes a dedicated board of directors, many volunteers, subsidy from many people and an attractive place to play.

What if some of the small theater groups were to combine their special interests; musicals, comedies, the classics, Shakespeare into one strong theater group? Isn't that a typical theater season? And what if an arts council was started, a support group of members from all the Peninsula towns? Certainly Carmel could do more but shouldn't all the city governments contribute to cultural activities that benefit them all?

How about it, theater enthusiasts ... isn't it time to stand up and be counted? All together now

View through a Grapevine Fence

by Ben

FEBRUARY MAY WELL become the month known locally as the time when the "hit the river," not the "hit the fan."

HOORAY FOR GENE HAMMOND! He spelled it out—there just is no way to increase available parking spaces for residents if such residents can park twice as long.

The only effective measure would be to have residents' cars stickered, and the residents would be able to park only one-half of the allotted time. Then there would be TWICE the turnover.

YEARS AGO, ABOUT 20 to be specific, I did my own parking survey in town, with Howard Brunn and a couple of other guys. We found then that the store owners and real estate people were the main users of the one and two hour spaces. They were always able to leave the shop or office to juggle their cars around. Howard and a few of the guys started walking to work, hoping to set an example, but finally gave up in disgust.

Things haven't changed a bit. The same people are doing the very same thing, in the very same parking spaces.

Now, frankly, I have spent the last eight months driving into town on errands at every hour of the day, and I have seldom had any real problem in finding a place to park. Maybe it wasn't right in front of the door I wanted, but it wasn't that far away.

If I can do it, then so can you.

CALIFORNIA SEEMS TO have a fatal attraction for Oklahomans. But this new bunch with the Carmel Valley Ranch development does not include any John Steinbeck to glorify them. They seem like just another "Big Wind from Oklahoma." And the chaff is pretty thick, with their verbal Dust Bowl, trying to obscure our vision of the facts.

Play it again, Sam. Farly.

CARMEL VALLEY ALWAYS means horses to me. I'm not a horsey man. Like to look at them, pat them and feed them carrots. And whoop it up pretty good at Derby time. (Anything for a julep). But there's a family horse story that really is one for the books.

My mother was visiting in New York City, doing the concert, theater, etc. rounds. She was no stranger to horses and their ways, and New York's finest had mounted police in the theatrical district. Still do, I think.

Anyhow, she was walking along 45th Street on her way to a show, and passed a police horse, whose officer had dismounted for some reason or other. The horse started following her down the street. The policeman came running up, yelling, "Hey, lady, what are you doing with my horse?"

Mother stopped. The horse stopped. She replied that she was only going to the theater, so the officer told her to go on. She did, and the horse started after her again, this time down the sidewalk.

The officer grabbed her arm and demanded to know what she thought she was doing. Mother replied, "I don't want your horse. He's chasing me." Then she thought for a second and asked, "Are you married?"

"Yes, ma'am," he replied.

"Well, then," said my mother, "you may understand. The only possible explanation is that I'm wearing Blue Grass perfume."

She made the curtain on time.

BY GOLLY, THERE'S common sense afoot! The planning commission subcommittee is recommending to not follow Mayor Norberg's regulatory wants.

Let's face it: if tourist-oriented businesses were 500 feet apart, Carmel's business district would spread over an area greater than greater Los Angeles.

Let's hope the common sense virus spreads to the entire commission.

SPEAKING OF parliamentarianism (in which the head of government and the cabinet depend upon the confidence of the majority of the lower house), such is not the case nowadays, at least here in Carmel.

Confidence is being shaken like an accusing finger.

Our council may be proceeding according to "Roberts' rules," but they are not proceeding "according to Hoyle."

The Village:

Council to act on residential design review

SECOND READING of an ordinance that would establish design review for all new and remodeled two-story houses in Carmel is scheduled at the Carmel City Council's session Monday evening. It meets at 8 p.m. in the council chambers at City Hall.

The Carmel Planning Commission would be the panel to review the home designs.

Opponents claim it is a poor attempt to legislate taste and design. Backers insist it will put an end to the "large house" boom.

It is the toughest set of residential construction laws ever proposed here. The commission would be free to reject any two-story home design plans it did not like. Such review is now reserved only for the Carmel business district.

Angry opposition to the new controls has been voiced by Councilman Howard Brunn and Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson. The Carmel Board of Realtors has also called the ordinance "too restrictive."

But the council majority and five Carmel planning commissioners have voted to support the rigid controls.

THE COUNCIL IS ALSO scheduled to hear an appeal from owners of the Carmel Kitchen restaurant. Last month the owners were ordered to remove from the restaurant windows four stained-glass signs that depicted food items sold in the restaurant.

They were removed about three weeks ago.

While the matter is under appeal, owners intend to hang the stained-glass items in the rear of the restaurant and light them from behind, according to Joe Prothrow, the restaurant manager. The "artwork" will be for sale, he added.

The four objects, valued at $10,000, are signs and not artwork, the Board of Adjustments ruled in January. Once removed from the window location, however, the board can no longer review them as signs.

The city sign regulations are "overly broad, ambiguous and violate the first and 14th amendments," claimed owner Steve Jacobs, in a letter of appeal to the council.

The objects are "fine merchandise and do not constitute signs," he said. He called the board's actions "selective enforcement" of Carmel laws.

THE COUNCIL IS ALSO scheduled to review the proposed rezoning of Mission Trail Park. In November 1977, the council accepted a Carmel Planning Commission recommendation to rezone most of the 33-acre park from R-1 (residential) to P-1 (park) zoning.

But a public hearing was never scheduled and the property was not rezoned.

City Administrator Jack Collins took the blame for that. He called it an "administrative foul-up."

The entire park area, except the 1.5 acres surrounding Flanders mansion, is proposed for the rezoning. A city greenhouse scheduled for construction east of the mansion would be excluded from the new zoning. Buildings are not permitted on property zoned for moderate park use.

Use of storage yard snarled in red tape; city pays rent, though

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CARMEL CITY OFFICIALS hope it will some day be a city storage yard. Meanwhile, a two-acre parcel of land behind the Carmel Mission Basilica has already cost taxpayers more than $3,000.

It could cost thousands more before the city finds out if it can ever use the property, owned by Max Hodges.

The proposed corporation yard site has gone unused since the city began rental payments last September, according to City Administrator Jack Collins.

Neighbors do not want it. City officials would give their eye teeth for it. And the issue appears too hot for the Coastal Commission to handle.

A hearing that was scheduled for Monday has been delayed until March 12. The commission staff cannot seem to agree on a recommendation. "The project has a lot of basic problems," explained Joy Chase, a staff analyst for the Coastal Commission.

The question is complicated by the county's insistence that the city seek a use permit. A hitch in the county Health and Safety Code could force permit approval.

That is what Jose Rafael Ramos, a deputy county counsel, said in a memorandum last month to Bob Slimmon, the zoning administrator. The Pine Cone obtained a copy of that memorandum from Ramos' office.

"It must be admitted that cities are generally exempt from county zoning ordinance ... however, an exception to that general rule is found concerning the disposal of refuse," Ramos said.

The wood chips, earth fill and street sweepings the city proposes to store could be considered refuse, Ramos stated.

Unless the city decides to break the five-year lease agreement, it must continue to pay $500 per month in rental fees.

Lease payments through February were $2,666, according to Douglas Peterson, the Carmel finance director. Another $500 was scheduled to be paid this week, he said.

"If it seems like it's going to be too long a delay," Collins said, "we'll go back and give a status report to the council."

THE USE PERMIT will be sought from Slimmon. The Monterey County Board of Supervisors has delegated its authority to grant use permits for disposal of refuse to the zoning administrator, Ramos said.

"Good relations" with the county and the state Coastal Commission prompted the city to finally seek the permit, Collins said.

The most immediate concern, however, is Coastal Commission approval.

"I'm substantially concerned that it (the storage yard) may not be a proper use for the site," said Mrs. Mary Henderson, chairman of the Central Coast Regional Commission.

Materials such as street sweepings could run off into the nearby Carmel River. She is also concerned with traffic impact and the proximity of the yard to the Carmel Mission.

"The access is very, very awkward," she said in a telephone interview on Friday. "And there is a serious conflict in traffic. It could further hamper people from getting to the coastal views," she said. Coastal access is one of the primary concerns of the commission.

"I'd personally like to know if there are

Restaurant owner to appeal 'no' on balcony expansion

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

EMILIO MICHAEL Tamburri admits his restaurant is one of the worst-located in town. The 50-seat cafe on Mission Street is tucked between the Carmel Plaza and the Carmel Minimall.

Now Tamburri wants some growing room.

The restaurant opened five years ago under different ownership as the only cafeteria-style restaurant in Carmel.

Tamburri bought the restaurant eight months ago. He converted it to an Italian menu with sit-down dining, but kept the prices moderate. Now Tamburri wants to expand. He has proposed 24 additional seats that would be placed around small tables along an indoor balcony one floor above the Minimall shops. The area is now a pedestrian walkway.

The Carmel Planning Commission rejected Tamburri's proposal last December.

Commissioners said the plan would sandwich another floor of businesses between Minimall shops below and Joseph Magnin above. Three consecutive floors of commercial use were outlawed here in 1974. That law was enacted to put a stop to multi-levelled floors of shops like those at the Plaza.

Tamburri has appealed the decision.

The City Council is scheduled to hear the appeal when it meets March 12 at 8 p.m. at City Hall.

"Owners were warned from the beginning that the Minimall rooftop area could not be used commercially," said Carmel Planning Director Robert Griggs.

"Look," said Tamburri, "I didn't design the Plaza. How do they expect me to reconstruct it?"

"Sure, we could help him (Tamburri)," commented Robert Stephenson, the Carmel Planning Commission chairman. But if we do it for him, more people will want it ... and there goes the whole neighborhood."

COMMISSIONERS WERE NOT impressed with an offer by Plaza management to trade other retail floor area for the right to expand Emilio's above the Minimall.

The area proposed for non-commercial conversion is on the upper level of the Plaza. It is now rented on a month-to-month basis to Midori Fashions, a fashion design firm. It is located adjacent to the Plaza management offices east of the Bank of America on the second floor above Ocean Avenue.

Plaza owners say they are willing to convert that area to office or storage space in exchange for expansion of Emilio's. Total commercial floor area of the Plaza would remain the same.

EILEEN THOMPSON, chairman of the land use subcommittee, said the exchange would favor the Plaza because it would actually increase area used by the Plaza.

Her explanation, however, baffled Tamburri at a December meeting of the Board of Adjustments.

"Now, you say (it is) an exchange, but it isn't, is it? Because it is space that is being used for space that will be used. And this is space that isn't being used now for space that will be used ...," she said.

"I recognize he has a problem location, but I don't think it's up to us to solve it," Stephenson said.

"I'm sorry. I think I missed some of that," Tamburri replied.

"Yes, I think so," Mrs. Thompson stated.

"The land use committee didn't miss it."

A verbal tussle ensued between Mrs. Thompson and Tamburri.

"Another thing that I think is interesting is the fact that two or three months ago, Mr. Tamburri came to us and said he needed a menu box because he wasn't getting enough business. Now he is saying he has so much business that he has to have more seating," Mrs. Thompson said.

"No, excuse me. I didn't say that, you just did," Tamburri interrupted. "I said as a provision to my customers—especially with locals that enjoy the privacy of an indoor-outdoor feeling—they would like to have the balcony with the option of using it."

"It's wild," Tamburri told the Pine Cone last week. "It just doesn't make sense to me. I still haven't heard a good reason why I can't use it."

"I recognize he has a problem location, but I don't think it's up to us to solve it," Stephenson said.

The job of the commission is to "hold the line" on objectionable design and development, Stephenson said. The commission is not there to help businesses, he stated.

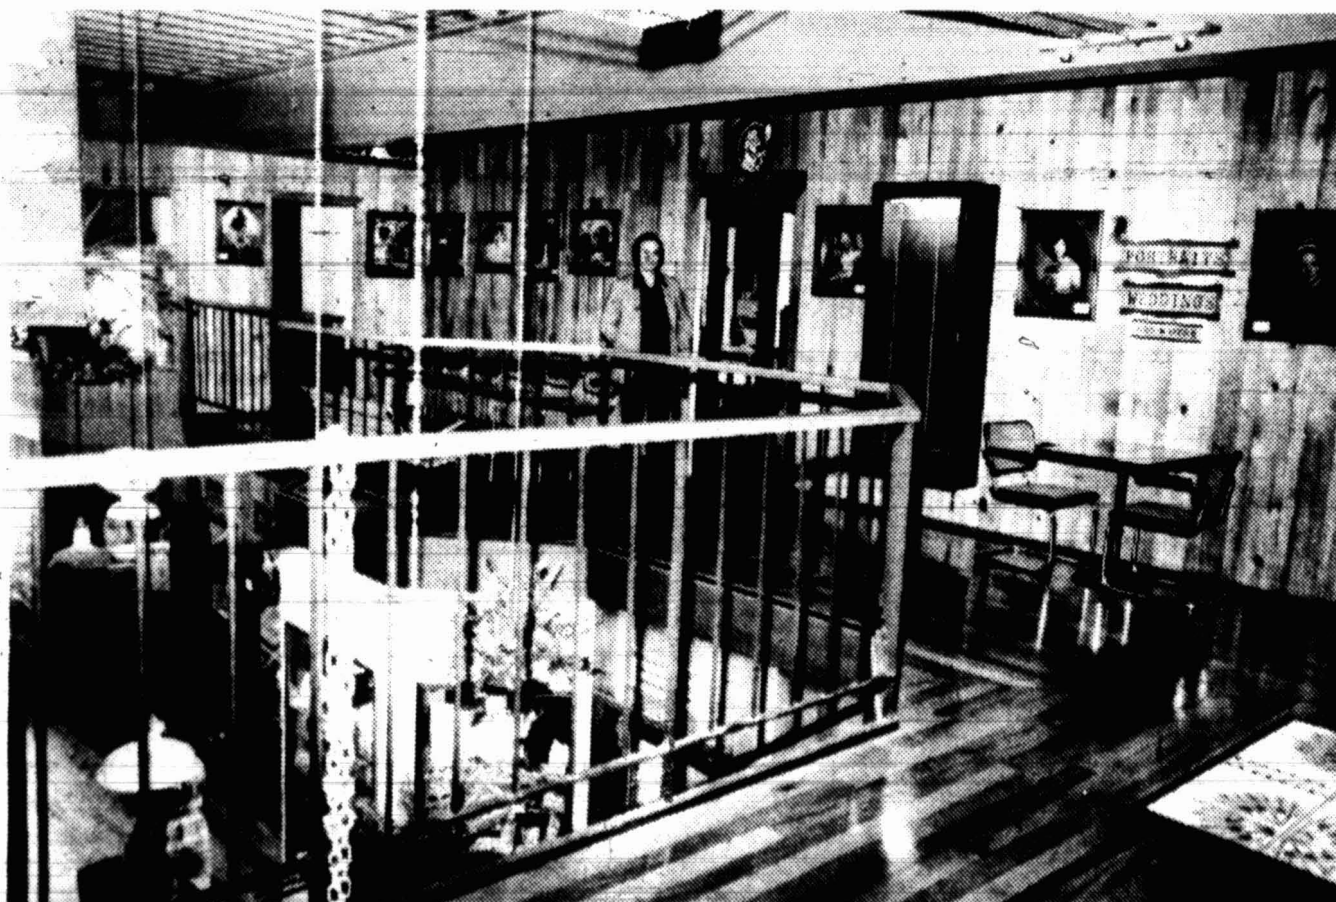

"I suppose we could have allowed a giant neon sign in front of Chinois and attracted more business there," Stephenson joked. "But we try to do what we can do to hold the line." Chinois restaurant on Dolores and Seventh recently went out of business.

When Tamburri purchased Emilio's in June, the commission warned him that he could not expand. Still, he said, he has always planned to use the balcony for additional seating. "The Plaza management told me there was no reason we couldn't overcome the problem if it was approached properly," he said.

TAMBURRI IS a 10-year Carmel resident. He formerly owned the Carmel Reconstruction Company. Emilio's is his first restaurant. His business is 75 percent local, he claimed. Residents and frequent customers can receive 10 percent discounts, he added.

At least 30 customers have urged him to establish balcony dining, he said. "When I tell them the city won't let me, they laugh," he said.

"We're just talking about putting some tables and chairs out there," he said. "Now who will that offend?"

MICHAEL TAMBURRI, owner of Emilio's, was told by the Carmel Planning Commission that he cannot expand his restaurant onto this balcony above the

Carmel Mini-Mall. He is scheduled to appeal that decision to the Carmel City Council March 12. (David Eaton photo)

City fears Carmel Inn conversion to motel use

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

ARE THERE PLANS to convert the only retirement home in Carmel into a motel?

New owners of the Carmel Inn on San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth, would not deny that possibility last week.

One owner said it is not likely "in the foreseeable future." Another owner said she did not know how it would be used. Meanwhile, it now operates as a residential care facility.

On Feb. 15, the Carmel Business License Review Board voted unanimously to limit use of the facility strictly to residential care.

The 20-unit facility has been a resident care home, primarily for senior citizens, since 1968.

It was purchased in December for $500,000 by Agnes Gump and Arthur McEwen. Both are longtime Carmel residents.

"I don't know what it (the building) will be used for. I'm as puzzled about it as you are," said Mrs. Gump in a telephone interview last week. She said it "could never" be a motel, but hinted it could serve as an inn for out-of-town guests.

McEwen said it will "continue operating exactly at its present use." He said there are "no plans in the foreseeable future," to convert it to a motel.

But the city staff is not convinced of that. "I think they are interested in renting overnight accommodations," said Jack Collins, the Carmel city administrator. He is chairman of the Business License Review Board.

Three times at the Feb. 15 session, he asked the owners if they intended converting it to motel use. The question was never an area zoned (R-1) residential.

CARMEL HAS NEVER had a city corporation yard. Instead, it has borrowed space in its city parks to store city supplies.

Some of that material is now stored in Forest Hill Park, at the north end of Carmel. But the city plans to develop the park as a recreational area and the supplies must go.

Without a city storage yard, the city is forced to turn down thousands of dollars worth of clean earth fill needed for city projects, Collins said.

SIXTY-TWO CARMEL residents and 19 county residents signed a petition against the proposed storage yard. All of the fathers and sisters from the Carmel Mission signed the petition.

In 1969 the city applied for and received a county permit to store street-sweeping rubbish on the Hodges property.

Controversy swirled even then. Finally, in 1973, the council voted unanimously to withdraw from all agreements to use the Hodges property as a fill site. In 1974, the county permit expired.

answered. Collins said he suspected that the owners desire a change in its use because:

- The name has been changed from the Carmel Inn for Seniors to the Carmel Inn.

- Owners have proposed American plan accommodations. Under that plan, meals are included in the prices of rooms.

- His questions about their intended use went unanswered.

Reacting to the apparent uncertainty of the owners, the board approved the license only for a resident care room. For any other type of use a new license would have to be obtained.

"We precluded any type of operation other than what they have there right now," Collins said.

Sale of the business was handled by Carmel Realty. "I don't know what they're interested in," said Art Strasburger, an owner of Carmel Realty. "So far as I know, they're not talking about conversion," he said.

PARKING AND ZONING regulations restrict the use of the facility, according to Robert Griggs, the Carmel planning director.

Carmel motels are limited to one unit for every 1,000 square feet of land area. The Carmel Inn is on an 8,000 square-foot site, which would limit it to eight units under motel use. There are presently 20 units there. Twelve would have to be eliminated if the building were converted to a motel under current regulations.

Motels must also provide one parking space for each room. That would require eight spaces there. No parking is presently provided at the facility.

The American plan for meals is not an unusual concept, McEwen said. "Guests just receive meals as part of the arrangement," he said.

Del Monte Lodge in Pebble Beach and the Highlands Inn south of Carmel offer American plan accommodations.

The Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital north of Carmel includes the price of meals in the room costs, according to Ralph Unterbrink, the administrator. "But we certainly don't call it the American plan," he said.

The Carmel Inn, however, is not limited to seniors. "Our state of California license says we cannot differentiate. Anyone who comes here with a medical history ... must be accepted," said Mrs. Gump. Six of the 20 rooms at Carmel Inn are vacant, she added.

THE NAME CHANGE from Carmel Inn for Seniors to Carmel Inn "is not really a change at all," McEwen said. He said it was "always" known as the Carmel Inn.

The original business license for the nursing home is listed as the Carmel Inn for Seniors. But it is now listed as Carmel Inn in the Monterey County Telephone Directory.

"I've known Carmel all my life," said Mrs. Gump. "I'm mainly interested in the buildings that should be preserved. I still don't know the potential this place (Carmel Inn) could have," she said.

The original structure was built in 1927. It housed a plumbing shop and apartments. Built by James E. Nichols for $9,000, the original owner was A. Kluegel.

Alterations were made in 1935 in preparation for apartment/hotel conversion in 1937. The contractors were Hugh Comstock and N. J. Reimers.

In 1968, it was purchased by Willard E. Patton and converted to a "retirement hotel," according to records in the city Building Department.

In 1977, permits were approved for kitchen remodeling at the Carmel Inn, according to city records.

alternative sites inside the city. Right now they want to put the solution in someone else's backyard," she stated.

Mrs. Henderson, a former Redwood City councilman, said she would look "very closely" at the city's response to the issues the commission raised. "If the impact is serious, I don't see how I could accept it," she said.

"I want more information on access," said Mrs. Chase, the staff analyst, "and we still don't have firm enough information on what will go on the site," she added.

The decision to seek a county permit was a "good step," she said. "I don't know, however, if that will affect our final decision.

The city lease on the property began Sept. 20, 1978. The city has bargained for the use of that land for nearly a decade.

The property is owned by Max Hodges, a landscaper. Hodges stockpiles manure and other materials on the site. The property is in

Sanitary District again considers buying Odello land

Originally, the Carmel district wanted to dispose of treated wastewater directly on the land. That option was ruled out by the Regional Water Quality Control Board because of the chance of polluting the Carmel Valley aquifer. But according to District Engineer Kevin Walsh, there are several other treatment options now available which require a large area of open land. These make purchase of the Odello land feasible.

THE CARMEL SANITARY District is negotiating to purchase 134 acres of land on the east side of Highway 1 owned by the Odello family.

District board members Vernon Head and Jim Pruitt met with Bruno Odello in January to determine if the family would be willing to sell the parcel. The district wants the land as an eventual expansion site for its treatment plant on the west side of Highway 1.

According to Head, Odello was "very nice, very cooperative," and is willing to sell "if we can come up with a price they're willing to accept."

The district negotiations will not delay the Odello family's plans to win approval for a hotel-condominium-shopping area development on the property.

The Odellos are in the process of producing a Specific Plan agreement with Monterey County to permit a 200-room hotel, 97 condominiums and a farmers market on the land south of the Carmel River.

Odello has said in the past that if there is opposition to development of the land, critics should buy the property from his family.

He reiterated last Thursday that he is always open to the possibility of selling to the district.

"We've left that door open before," he said. "If they have plans, we certainly would be happy to consider it."

THE DISTRICT has discussed buying the land from the Odellos since the early 1970s. Each time in the past, the district has backed off.

Originally, the Carmel district wanted to dispose of treated wastewater directly on the land. That option was ruled out by the Regional Water Quality Control Board because of the chance of polluting the Carmel Valley aquifer.

But according to District Engineer Kevin Walsh, there are several other treatment options now available which require a large area of open land. These make purchase of the Odello land feasible, he said.

Aqua solar techniques involve growing plants or fish in sealed effluent ponds to remove wastes from the water, he said. The Odello property could be used in that manner.

The district could use a portion of the property for a storage reservoir, he added. The reservoir would be helpful in any reclamation plan by guaranteeing a stable supply of wastewater for customers regardless of day to day fluctuations in flow through the treatment plant.

HEAD SUGGESTED in a Jan. 29 memorandum that the district consider buying the land for expansion of the treatment plant because new development in Carmel Valley is eliminating most of the open land available to the district.

And as the open space disappears, the district is considering expansion of its boundaries to serve the Carmel Highlands and Carmel Valley, which could require a larger treatment plant.

Both of the expansion areas are served exclusively by septic tanks. Head noted in his memorandum that the Valley septic tanks are on top of the Carmel Valley aquifer, the source of drinking water for the entire Monterey Peninsula.

"Actions by health authorities, or public opinion might result in a termination of septic tank usage and the problem handed to the district for solution," Head said in his memorandum.

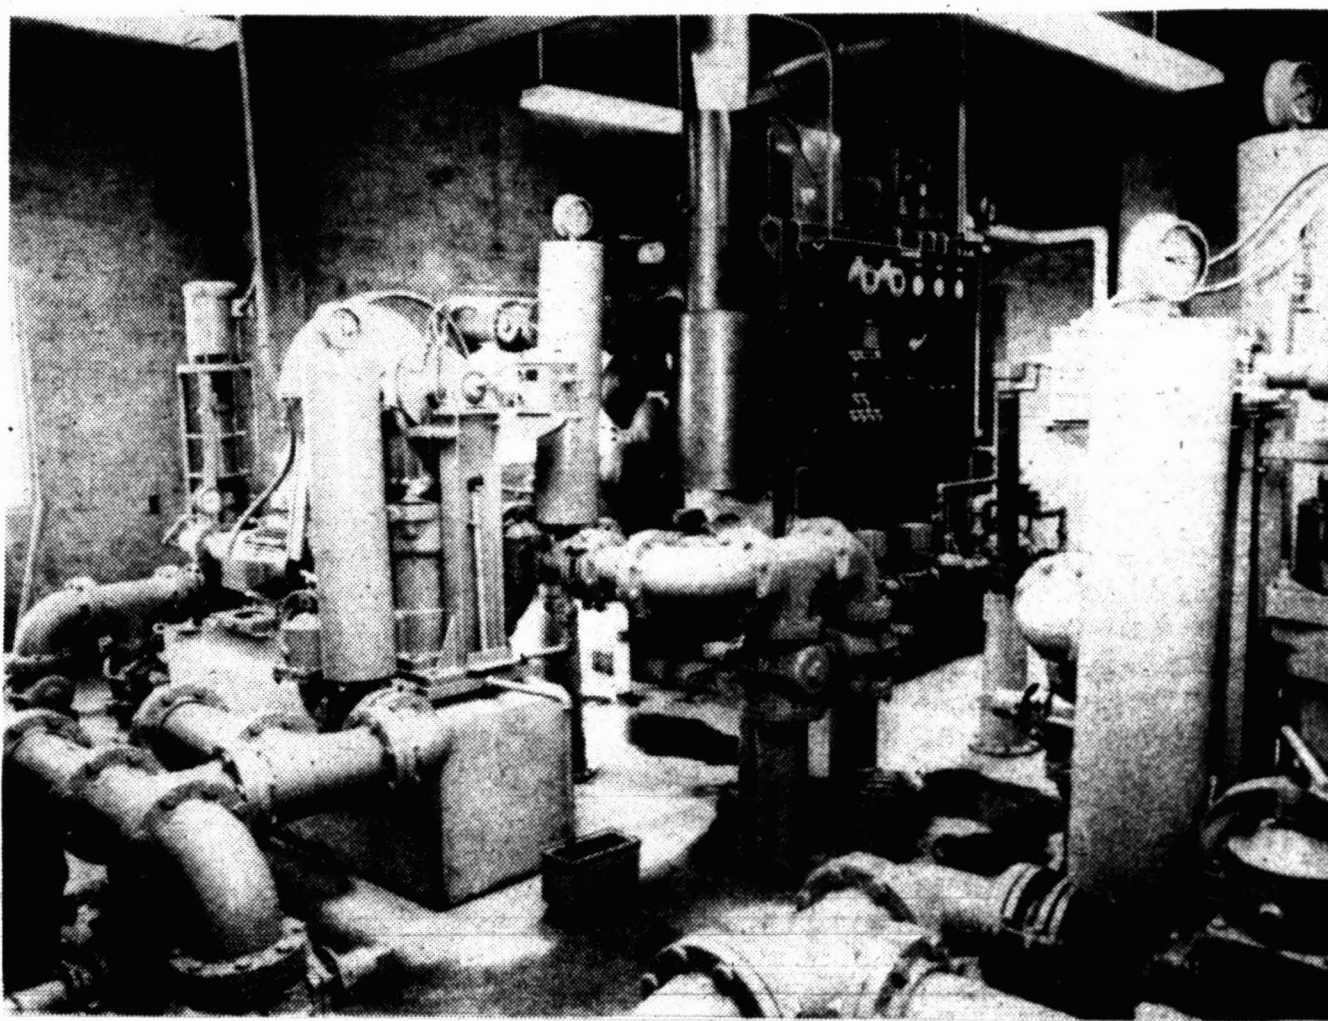

The sanitary district does not have the money to buy the land now, but could negotiate payment terms with the Odellos, he told the Pine Cone last week.

Head, Pruitt and Walsh were appointed to a committee to pursue negotiations with the Odellos. Head said the best approach might be for the district to get an independent appraisal of the land and offer to buy it from the family at that price.

CARMEL SANITARY DISTRICT'S new $1.1 million sludge digester is nearly complete, with only exterior paving and a check-through of all operating systems needed to get it fully in operation this month. The digester precipitates the solids from sewage before wastewater gets further clarification and filtration. Pipes and control board inside the digester conduct sewage through the plant and control the temperature of the sewage treatment process in the digester. (David Eaton photos)

The following letter is published for the benefit of the citizens of the Monterey Peninsula and the residents of Carmel Sanitary District and the Pebble Beach Sanitary District, to present a clearer picture of what the proposed Early Start Reclamation Project of the Carmel Sanitary District will cost.

It also provides arguments for or against the benefits that would be developed if the project is implemented as is being required by the State Water Resources Control Board.

A Public Meeting on the Environmental Impact Report for the Areawide Facilities Plan which includes the proposed project will be held on March 27, 1979 at 7:30 P.M. in the Sunset Auditorium, San Carlos at 9th, Carmel, California.

Chairman of the Board
Division of Water Quality
State Water Resources Control Board
P.O. Box 100
Sacramento, CA 95801
Dear Sir:

The following comments are respectfully presented as "A Contrary to Carmel Sanitary District (CSD) Board Opinion" by James Pruitt and Ted Weller, Taxpayers, CSD.

The CSD is currently in the unique position of having to spend millions of dollars of taxpayers' money and for perhaps questionable significant benefit to those taxpayers. The central issue here is an all too familiar tale of how control has quietly shifted from local hands to state and federal boards and agencies.

How the district got to this point is interesting and is a reflection of our changing times. For example, when the district first started in 1908 there were very few customers and a budget of only a few hundred dollars per year. Treatment and disposal consisted of mostly individual cesspools. Control of district requirements and activities was in the hands of local residents. This situation was altered gradually as new residents came to the area and sanitation facilities were expanded to meet their needs. Within the past decade change in technology and increased control over local affairs by state and federal authorities have had their effect on the CSD.

In 1971 the California Regional Water Quality Control Board (RWQCB) issued Certificate of Conformance No. 71-6 to the CSD for construction of a sanitary sewer outfall into Carmel Bay. Accordingly, in 1972, under federal and state grants, an ocean outfall was constructed with a point discharge into Carmel Bay and was approved by state and federal authorities for use. The RWQCB certificate was valid subject to the following two conditions:

(Condition 1). The CSD shall conduct a comprehensive biological, physical and chemical monitoring and research study to determine the effects of the discharge within Carmel Bay, terms and details of said study to be approved by the California RWQCB, Central Coast Region, and the state Water Resources Control Board.

(Condition 2). If the study required by Condition 1 shows that the beneficial uses of Carmel Bay and adjacent waters require additional protection, the CSD shall do one or a combination of the following by Feb. 1, 1974:

- (1) Extend outfall
- (2) Increase degree of treatment
- (3) Implement an alternate method of discharge or wastewater reclamation

All conditions of Certificate No. 71-6 were met. In 1974, the CSD Board by its own initiative, not by state board order, explored the possibility of water reclamation on the Odello property, based on item 3 of Condition 2. The results of this study showed water reclamation by this method was economically unfeasible on the test site. The cost of this study was $86,000, which was paid for with local funds.

The CSD has an outstanding record for providing protection to the Carmel Bay through the years since its formation in 1908, yet it now has to contend with the restrictive requirements of a designation of Carmel Bay as an Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS).

BUREAUCRATS ORDER ABOUT FACE
On June 19, 1975, the state Water

Resources Control Board (SWRCB) adopted a resolution designating portions of Carmel Bay as an ASBS. This ASBS designation was established on an arbitrary line in the bay. SWRCB action was hot on the heels of the completed construction of the new outfall, also a state-required project. The ASBS concept was approved by the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club and the Carmel Citizens' Committee. Other local residents tacitly approved it by not making themselves heard in opposition.

It has now been three years since the CSD, by a 3-2 vote of the Board of Directors, permitted the ASBS designation to go unchallenged. At this point, Board members agreed that it must be assumed that local residents think the ASBS benefits the community, although there is serious conflict of opinion among CSD directors regarding this issue. Pebble Beach Sanitary District is unanimous the ASBS should be removed.

Point Lobos State Reserve has an ASBS of its own. The ASBS for Carmel Bay, which has also been approved by the state Departments of Park and Recreation and Fish and Game only adds redundancy. Two members of the CSD wonder if the community really understands the financial impact of the ASBS. The Fish and Game Department has established its control in the Carmel Bay ASBS.

In response to the designation for Carmel Bay as an ASBS and at the direction of the SWRCB, the CSD commenced preparation of an areawide facilities plan designed to investigate alternatives to the present method of ocean disposal. A public workshop was conducted in October 1977 at Carmel High School. Reclamation seemed favored with no knowledge of costs. Since this workshop, the CSD staff and consultants have been busily involved in the following activities:

1. Preparing evaluations of population and wastewater flow projections.
2. Meeting with various regulatory agencies in an attempt to define required treatment levels for disposal and reclamation alternatives.
3. Analyzing reclaimed water markets.
4. Evaluating possible sites for reclaimed water.
5. Conducting infiltration/inflow analysis of the district's collection system.
6. Holding meetings with the district's Policy Advisory Committee, Technical Advisory Committee, Administrative Advisory Committee and with other local organizations and agencies.

The progress and results of the CSD staff and consultants activities was reported to the Board of Directors in January 1979. This report included information concerning reclamation alternatives for flows from the district's existing service area only. Information concerning evaluation of wastewater flows from the Carmel Valley and the Highlands will be included in a later report.

MORE PAPER THAN PIPE

The costs to date for studying reclamation and the Areawide Facilities Plan total $515,640 including the Odello study. The local portion of these costs has been $226,246. It is estimated that local costs to complete the AFP will exceed $750,000, and at present this number is subject to change depending on the amount of additional studies required by federal and state agencies.

On June 1, 1978, a workshop was held at the SWRCB office in Sacramento regarding a feasibility level facilities plan submitted by the district. At this meeting, it was pointed out that the CSD was a minor contributor to the average annual loads on Carmel Bay. Runoff from the Carmel River, San Jose Creek, Carmel city streets and the terrain surrounding the Bay contributes many times the amount contributed by the CSD. The result was a SWRCB ruling which allowed discharge into Carmel Bay from November to April only. Reclamation is to be provided for during the remaining six months of the year. Even though this indicates a lessening of stringent direction by the SWRCB, the CSD is still charged with the responsibility for developing an AFP. No matter which alternative is finally implemented, local taxpayers face both additional capital outlay and operating maintenance costs. Some of the alternatives under study and estimated costs are discussed in the following paragraphs.

WHAT IS THE NEXT STEP?

The district board of directors will shortly be required to make major policy decisions which will have significant financial impacts on the citizens of the district. These decisions include:

- (1). Will discharge ban by the state hamper ability to manage reclaimed water for Carmel Valley and CSD?
- (2). Is cost of reclamation too great for the benefits received?
- (3). Should discharge to bay be banned when other pollutants effect the bay more and there is no proof CSD outfall harms the bay? Monitoring, in its sixth year, shows no harmful effects.

The Carmel Valley aquifer (the major supply for the California-American Water Co.), has supported the community since 1890. The Valley has numerous septic tanks, which are over the aquifer and the Carmel River, with water much worse than the reclaimed water of the CSD. These have not affected the quality of water in the aquifer. The CSD is not permitted to discharge its reclaimed water into the Carmel River; the Health Department prohibits this in Monterey County. We understand this is not the case in other counties in the state. Why can't this be done? It would add potable water directly to the aquifer during the summer months when the need is maximum.

In winter a program of reclamation might be possible through reclaiming rain runoff in cisterns by community effort.

WHICH WAY FROM HERE?

ZERO DISCHARGE to Carmel Bay may not be possible. When an emergency occurs, the discharge would have to go to the ocean. One alternative is to extend the outfall at a cost of $4 million to $7 million with considerable damage to the marine community during construction. Another alternative is water reclamation through golf course irrigation at an anticipated cost in excess of $10 million in 1979 dollars, $12,720,000 in 1981 dollars. Reclamation is not new to CSD. A 100 percent dry weather reclamation program was in operation from 1947 to 1970, when new Monterey County Health Department regulations prohibited its use.

Another alternative would be connection to Monterey Regional County Sanitation District (MRCSD) at a cost in the neighborhood of $13 million. The CSD would be committed to a share of their construction costs for treatment facilities and pipelines (capital costs) as well as paying for the yearly uses of energy, chemicals, and manpower (operation and maintenance—o & m). There would also be a major increase in energy use and no guarantee of capacity would be provided. This does not appear to be a reasonable alternative.

Another alternative is "no project" and removal of ASBS designation. All tests to date show no damage to the marine community. It is apparent that financially these costs could be the most favorable.

The question has been asked: Will the disposal limitations associated with ASBS cause all reasonable reclamation alternatives to be infeasible financially or technically? The answer is, yes, it probably will. To demonstrate this point, assume ASBS were removed. Then the feasibility of reclamation of water will be subject to the requirements of those responsible for public health and for protection of water quality. The monitoring of ocean waters which would be required would have a first year cost of approximately $60,000 to $100,000. The annual cost of monitoring in subsequent years would be approximately $15,000 to $20,000. These funds are all paid for out of local revenues, i.e., user charges.

The CSD has moved to present Alternative 631-A to the SWRCB in February or March of 1979. This alternate will upgrade the reliability of the existing plant and provide reclamation of water by golf course irrigation with limited ocean discharge during the summer months. The cost will be in the neighborhood of 12 to 13 million in 1981 dollars.

This will benefit the Monterey Peninsula as a whole as potable water will become available for public use instead of expending it on golf courses. The community should share the cost of reclamation as they will benefit.

AGAIN, THE QUESTION has been raised: Is it possible that disposal limitation could limit proper management of wastewater in Carmel Valley? We feel the answer is yes. Another limitation is, from information gathered to date, proper management will be marginal until growth is understood and SWRCB, Health Department, RWQCB and taxpayers living in the area outside the district determine reasonable criteria.

We feel that the CSD has been hamstrung in its efforts to provide efficient service to its customers. The staff has done an excellent job despite the restrictive controls which have been imposed by other agencies, and if these controls were reasonable, the district could provide protection to Carmel Bay at more reasonable costs.

In addition, the directors feel that it is imperative that the taxpayers be kept informed on the issues to be decided between 1978 and 1980. The taxpayer should be aware that the CSD board has no assurance the EPA and SWRCB will not impose new directives on water quality treatment which would simplify or complicate our problems. If history repeats itself this will happen.

Proposition 13 was passed by a sound majority in our area. The taxpayers expressed the need to stop ever-increasing spending. Millions of dollars to be expended by the CSD and many more millions to be expended by the Monterey County Regional Sanitary District seems to be in direct opposition to the feeling expressed by the taxpayers.

Thank you for your consideration.

March is Red Cross Month; Carmel

592 volunteers give their time as

ONE OF THE BUSIEST services offered by the Carmel Chapter to residents of the community is the loan of patient aids at no charge. Mrs. L. Pope (Alice), volunteer chairman of the service, picks out an aluminum walker for a patient. More than 200 items, including wheelchairs, crutches, canes, bedpans and walkers were loaned in 1978.

STUDENTS AT CARMEL HIGH receive water safety instructions from instructor Phyllis Crockett who is also a PE staff member at the high school and a Red Cross certified instructor-trainer of swimmers. Phyllis trains students so that they can teach as volunteers or as paid instructors. The Carmel chapter has one of the most active small chapter swimming programs in the area.

March is Red Cross month in Carmel.

Every resident of the Carmel and Carmel Valley area will receive an informational letter this month, listing the services and instructional classes offered by the Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross, located at Eighth and Dolores streets.

The chapter is funded only through volunteer donations. No funds are received from any charity organizations, such as United Way.

"We ask the community this month to respond with supportive contributions to enable us to pay the operational costs of our unique emergency ambulances in Carmel, Carmel Valley and Big Sur—the only such Red Cross service in the country," said Robert Pelz, chairman of the membership and fund-raising campaign for the local chapter.

"Our fund-raising goal this year is $42,712," said Jean Snow, executive director of the Carmel chapter.

The Carmel chapter is financially assisted in developing, maintaining and improving its fund-raising programs by the national headquarters of the American Red Cross in Washington, D.C.

But the Carmel chapter is an autonomous operation. It is managed and controlled by a 20-member board of directors. The executive director is the only paid staff member. There are 592 volunteers involved in the various chapter programs.

The primary obligation of the Carmel chapter of the Red Cross is to be prepared to provide immediate relief for disaster victims.

"We have an on-going disaster training program for volunteers," Mrs. Snow said. Also, the chapter maintains an up-to-date list of shelter facilities to house families that might be displaced by fire, flooding or an earthquake.

Frank Godfrey Jr. of Carmel and Virgil Chamberlain of Big Sur are coordinators of the disaster training program here.

The Carmel chapter is the only one in the country to own and operate its own ambulances. It has three—one each in Carmel, Carmel Valley and Big Sur.

The local chapter offers a wide range of services, including bloodmobiles, a blood donor program for Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, water safety courses, first aid classes, a "loan closet" for the supply of beds, walkers, wheelchairs, crutches and canes.

The chapter also provides a knitting production service under the supervision of Mrs. Patsy Danelz.

"I've been in charge of the production service for more years than I would like to remember," Mrs. Danelz said. "But, oh how wonderful the volunteers are who do the knitting for us. We send about 50 to 60 sweaters a year to the Veterans' Hospital. And they are delighted to receive them."

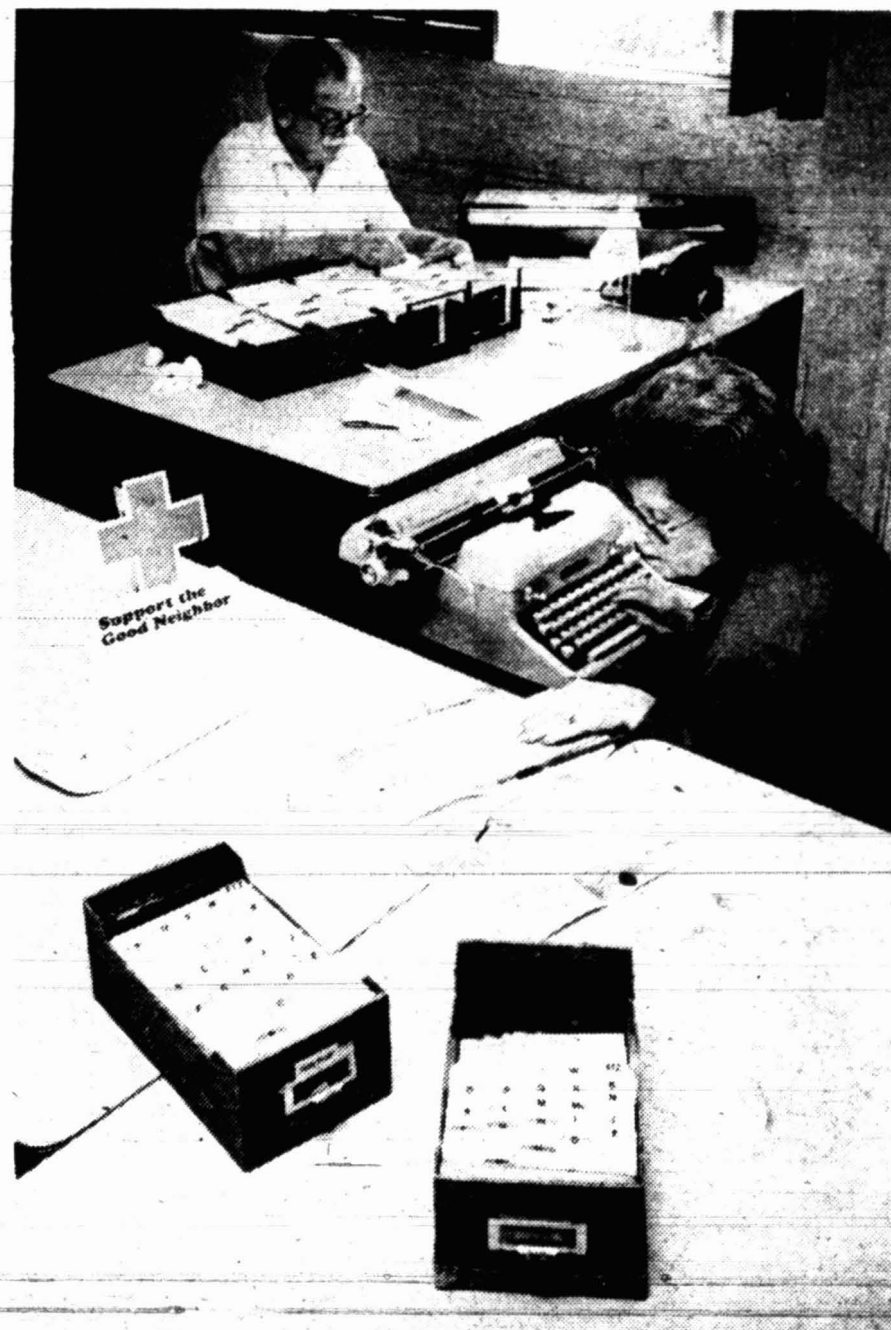

The chapter buys the yarn; volunteers do the knitting.

The chapter also provides instruction in cardiopulmonary resuscitation, boating safety and nursing, Mrs. Snow said. The Central California Blood Center bloodmobile visits Carmel and Carmel Valley six times a year.

The Carmel Red Cross chapter received its charter in 1916. The present chapter building was constructed in 1956 and the adjacent parking area was purchased in 1965. The chapter serves an estimated 20,000 people, within a territory that includes Carmel, Carmel Woods, Pebble Beach, Hatton Fields, Carmel Point, Carmel Valley, Carmel Highlands, Big Sur and coastlands south to the Monterey County line.

The American Red Cross is a single nationwide corporation, and every chapter, regional blood center, or other Red Cross service is an integral part of the organization. The Carmel chapter is bound by the Code of Procedure of the corporation.

Persons interested in serving as a Red Cross volunteer for the Carmel chapter can telephone Mrs. Snow, 624-6921.

ONE OF THE CHAPTER'S most demanding record-keeping jobs is keeping the blood donor cards up to date. Mr. and Mrs. Barney Brock spend a day every week at the chapter checking the Red Cross/Community Hospital Blood program donor records for the whole Peninsula. Lorelei makes sure that those entitled receive proper recognition pins and cards. This program is sponsored with the Monterey County Chapter although Carmel keeps the records. In addition, the Brocks also keep the Carmel chapter bloodmobile donor cards correct. Mrs. Francis Falkner is in charge of the telephoners for the bloodmobile donors, Mrs. Charles Rau is chairman of the telephoners for the hospital program.

MRS. PATSY DANELZ, head of production service for the Carmel chapter, boxes some of the 50 to 60 sweaters knitted by volunteers each year. The sweaters are donated to Veterans' Hospital in Yakima, Wash.

Carmel High School's French classes have a Caribbean flavor this year

By KEN PETERSON

IF THE FRENCH classes at Carmel High School have a Caribbean flavor this year, it is probably the work of Carole Gouyer.

Carole, 22, is the district's Amity Aide for the semester. The exchange program brings teachers from other countries to the United States to help in foreign language classes here. At the same time, they are improving their command of English, which will help them teach language students in their own nations.

Carole came to Carmel from Paris, where she is working on her master's degree at the

"I enjoy the American way of life."

Sorbonne University. But she is a native of Martinique, the daughter of a banana plantation owner on the island. And it is tales of life in the Caribbean that interest Carmel students the most, she said.

"They seem to enjoy it. I hope they do," Carole said.

During the first half of the semester, she is assisting in both beginning French courses and in a more advanced conversational French class. Later in the school year, she will be an aide at Middle School before returning to France over the summer.

She wants to explore California before she goes home.

Her exposure to life in the United States ranges from sojourns to Big Sur and the Salinas Valley to evenings disco dancing at J.J. McAdoo's and joining in the happy hour at the Forge in the Forest.

"I enjoy the American way of life," she said.

Still on her list of places to see are San Francisco, Los Angeles and Yosemite National Park.

Even without leaving Carmel, there are a lot of things she plans to do.

"I want to try diving here," Carole said. "And I'd like to try to surf."

She has experienced windsurfing in Martinique and cruising the neighboring islands in her brother's sailboat.

Her family has lived in Martinique for 200 years, she said.

But the life of the daughter of a banana plantation owner in the Caribbean is not as romantic as it sounds.

"We lived in the city," Carole said. "My father would visit the plantation occasionally, but he works in an office like a business. He is mainly involved in selling the bananas."

"My brother tried it, and he is now selling tires," she noted.

Carole never had any interest in the family business. She went to the university in Paris because there are no major schools on Martinique.

She has been at the Sorbonne for three years now. This is also her second year of teaching French. She taught earlier in England, a job she got through a French university association.

"They don't take care of you as well" as does the Amity Aide program, Carole said.

SHE IS LIVING in Carmel with Carmel High School teacher Bob Harr and his family. She pays no room or board, receives a meal a day through the Amity Aide program and gets $10 a week for spending money.

Harr said Carole is "a total delight to be with. She has become a part of the family. She spent three days away from us and when she came back my wife greeted her with a big hug."

The Harrs' young children are getting valuable exposure to French at home because of Carole's stay, he said.

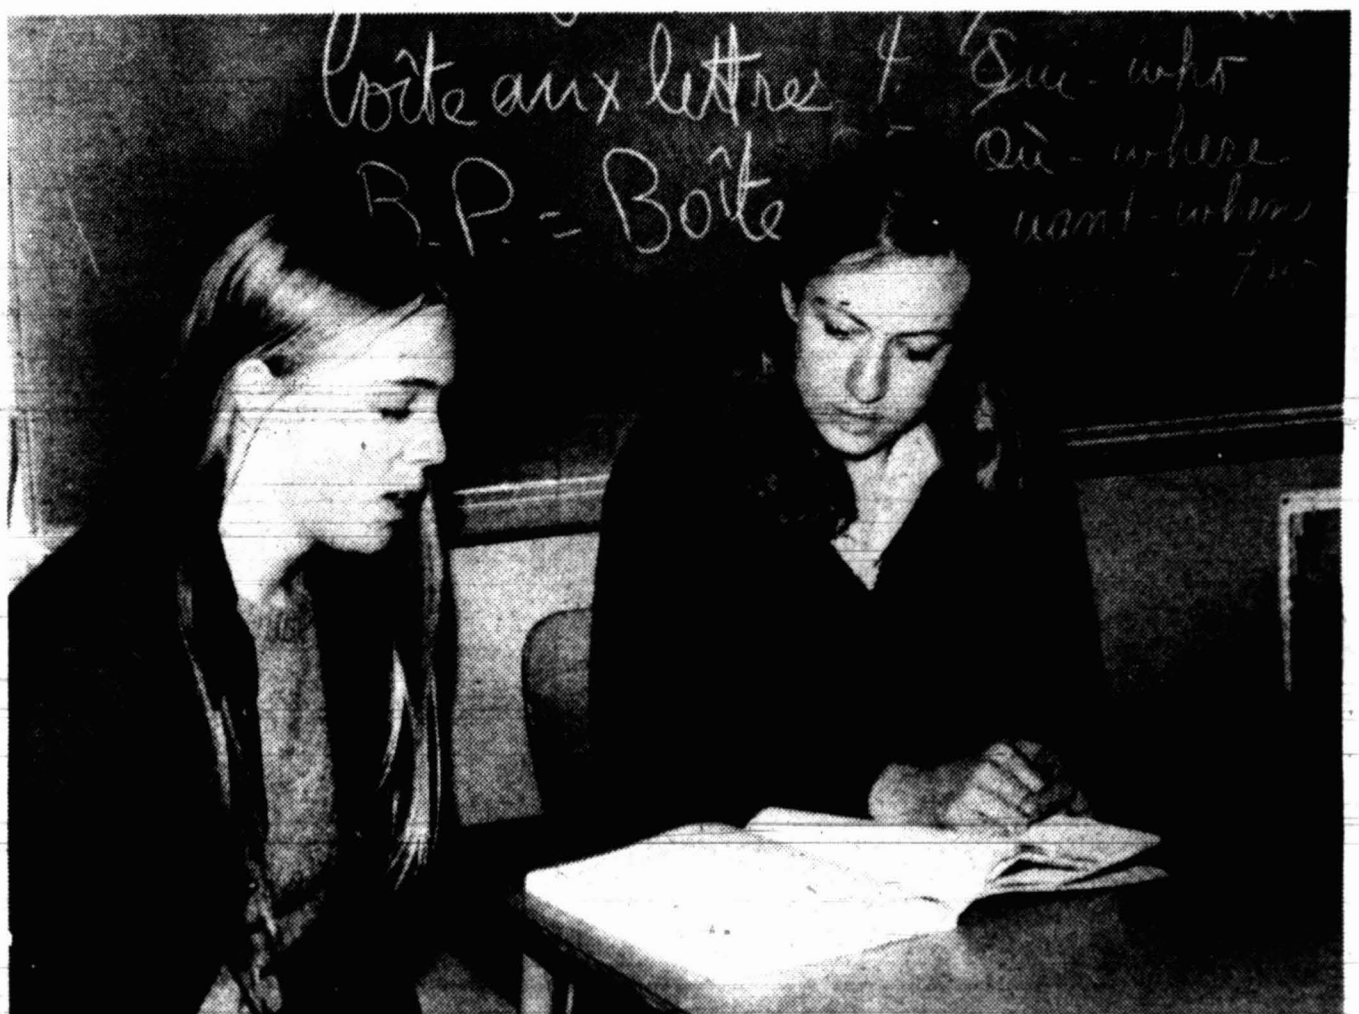

In addition to teaching three class periods a day, Carole is taking a U.S. history and a psychology course at Carmel High School. One of the requirements for Amity Aides is that they be both teachers and students during their stay in America as a way to improve their English.

Carole said she was surprised at the workload Carmel students carry compared to schools she has taught at or attended.

"What I like most in Carmel is the relaxed attitude, compared to England and Martinique," she said. "Everyone seems to work hard, but everyone enjoys it."

"I'm lucky to be here," she added.

program. She assists in French classes in Carmel while improving her English. She plans to teach English in her native Martinique when she finishes at the university in Paris. (David Eaton photo)

The Music Corner:

Colorful symphony concert

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Symphony presented a rich and colorful concert last Sunday at King Hall in Monterey. The orchestra's Steinbeck Memorial Concert included Copland's delightful Red Pony Suite, the Gershwin Piano Concerto in F with Paulena Carter, and the New World symphony by Dvorak.

The evening's first half, the Copland and Gershwin, was a smashing success, but the Dvorak symphony, with many beautiful and dramatic moments, suffered from what sounded like insufficient rehearsal time. Its reading was disturbed by occasionally rough ensemble and the players often seemed distracted by rhythmic uncertainty. These things were relatively minor, but their cumulative effect took the edge of excitement off the performance.

If The Red Pony is not Copland's finest, it certainly proved to contain much exquisite music and is a riot of orchestral color. This was originally film music, but it is hard to imagine that Copland was not thinking of its future use in the concert hall.

There is too much writing of subtle complexity than would be suggested by use in a film score. And so much the better, because it is such a concert treat. And, anyway, what other orchestra could have a more legitimate claim to it?

The Red Pony calls for a very large orchestra, developing, as it does, extraordinary use of percussion, brass and winds. The piece displays as wide a range of orchestral effects as any Copland wrote, and Taeuber and the orchestra played it with consummate skill and attention to detail. The performance exuded confidence and loving humor and was obviously nearly always a delight to the players.

I know of only two recordings of The Red Pony, and in neither does the conductor bring out some of the inner voicing so well as did Taeuber. If the general character of the work is coloristic scene painting, and therefore light, Taeuber treated it as a concert work, giving it that attention, and the result was sensational.

THE GERSHWIN Piano Concerto in F is a better work, for several reasons. Gershwin's assimilation of styles, that to many purists are incompatible, shows the composer's great talent. His use, thereby, of these diverse stylistic wellsprings in a work that flows with such ease and integrity as this concerto, puts it already in the masterpiece class. Its ease of expression should not be underestimated.

In the Copland work, one is always aware of the rational process behind the effect. In the Gershwin the rational and the expressive are much harder to separate. Copland relies on predictable intervals and rhythmic techniques to get that "Copland sound." Gershwin takes more chances, and occasionally misses the mark. For that matter, Gershwin is not as skilled at orchestration.

The orchestra in the concerto is occasionally too thick and unwieldy. (It would be most interesting, and probably advantageous to the piece, to hear it orchestrated by Copland.) But there is a spontaneousness and an impulsive exuberance in the concerto that is rarely found in Copland's music.

Of course all of this adoration presupposes artists who are temperamentally suited to recapture Gershwin. Paulena Carter is such an artist. Her playing matched the concerto with flair, impulse, and, most of all, style. Like the Copland, this piece pays great complements to the players, and it was obvious, from all the smiling, that everyone on stage was having fun.

Another spot that requires that same sense of style is the principal trumpet. Its numerous, and quite critical, solos were given that same jazzy Gershwin quality by Don Eshoff who took a well-earned bow at the conclusion of the performance.

The concerto suffered occasionally from a seeming difference of tempo opinion between pianist and conductor. In the first movement there was a certain "feeling of the way" through the first half, the probable result of there having been only one rehearsal with Miss Carter. The opening moments of the final movement saw a mismatch of tempi, the pianist pushing forward with more drive. This generally settled in though, recapturing the spirit and direction of the work.

Highlights of the Dvorak Symphony in e minor were the largo, with its famous English horn solo, and the finale, which achieved an exciting display of drama. But overall, the work's power and impact were not realized to the level attained by the Copland or, for that matter, the Mendelssohn "Scotch" symphony, played on the last Monterey County Symphony program.

It is not the fault of the music. It was the uncertainty of rhythm and ensemble among the players that kept the best from happening. Taeuber conducted without the score, giving rhapsodic expression to his direction. He was confident while the orchestra was distracted.

On the plus side were Donna Forster's English horn solo in the largo, as well as similar excellence from Ray Fabrizio, David Seeley and Al Rice. Taeuber led the largo at a fairly breezy tempo, but the entire movement achieved the most satisfying playing of the symphony.

Probably the performances in Carmel and Salinas had that final dimension that was missing from the Monterey performance.

'Music from Marlboro'

Saturday at Sunset

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Cultural and Community Center

MUSIC FROM MARLBORO, featuring six artists from The Marlboro Music Festival, is the next presentation of the Chamber Music Society at Sunset Theater, Saturday evening, March 3, at 8 p.m.

This chamber music group is one of several from the renowned Marlboro Music Festival which is under the artistic direction of Rudolf Serkin. Since they began in 1965, the Music From Marlboro concerts have become a unique part of the life of American chamber music. In fact, The New York Times has claimed these concerts are "as valuable as a national forest and should be put under the protection of Congress."

At the Marlboro Music Festival, leading musicians from all parts of the United States and many foreign countries come together for two months each summer to exchange ideas and explore together the vast repertoire of chamber music. The Marlboro Music Festival was founded in 1950 by three families bearing the famous musical names of Serkin, Busch, and Moysé. It gives professional musicians the opportunity to study and play in an informal setting removed from the pressure of concert life. Many outstanding young American ensembles can trace their origins to summers at Marlboro.

GRAND PRE GOES UP IN FLAMES

THE RECONSTRUCTED French village of Grand Pre, historically correct down to the last chimney pot, now lies in a heap of ashes on Point Lobos.

Peninsula residents ringed the hills last Tuesday to watch the inferno directed by moviemaker Elwin Carewe, as the final scenes from his film about 17th century France were recorded.

An estimated 1,000 gallons of coal oil were poured over walls and into the interiors of dwellings, and dry straw was strewn everywhere. A pistol shot was heard, then another as soldiers touched torches to the structures. Redcoats massed and ran for the village boundaries with the flames licking their heels.

One injury was recorded when a set man was caught by flames while lighting an interior. As his clothes caught fire he staggered out of the building. An assistant director plunged him into a bucket of water then led the injured man to a first aid station that had been readied in case of injuries.

The cost of this final scene for the Hollywood epic is estimated at nearly $85,000.

CANDIDATES READY FOR SCHOOL BOARD CAMPAIGN

Mrs. Hester Schoeninger, Carmel's candidate for the school board election March 29, is one of two women vying for a seat on the Monterey Union High School board of trustees.

Currently a trustee for Sunset School, she has been credited with its efficient administration.

COASTAL ROADWORK CONTINUES

Nearly one mile of highway has been excavated north and south of the Little Sur prison camp, base for the construction crew of the coast road, according to W. B. Albertson, superintendent of the camp.

Nearly 25,000 cubic yards of earth have been removed this year. Albertson estimates that his outfit can move about 30,000 yards a month and that the present job will average about 80,000 yards of excavation to the linear mile. Two bridges will be built along the coast.

Construction of the 45-mile segment between the point where the present Sur road will connect with the new highway, near Mill Creek to the southern end of San Simeon will require five years.

The workers are paid $2.10 a day. This represents their salary but not their earnings. They must pay for their clothing and personal supplies, their food and other camp necessities as well as the salaries of the men who guard them and all other overhead expenses.

Worse yet, they have to bear all expenses arising in connection with the attempted escape of any member of the outfit, even to the extent of paying rewards for his apprehension.

PASSION OF DOLORES ST. CHOSEN FOR CITY'S BLACK TOP FESTIVAL

THE CITY COUNCIL presented a repeat performance of its favorite drama, "I Just Don't Understand Why the Planning Commissioner Picks on Me," with Street Commissioner Francis Whitaker in the starring role.

The council decided that this year they would produce The Passion of Dolores Street instead of the Passion of Monte Verde for the street Department's annual Black Top Festival.

For one week in June, Dolores will serve as a mixing bowl for the oil and gravel surfacing material to be used in improving and maintaining city streets.

Council members said they hope the Dolores Street residents won't be as angry as the Monte Verde people were last year since a third of the mix will remain to repair their own street.

Hunting boundaries the same in Fish and Game proposal

Regional boundaries for deer hunting will continue in 1979 under proposed regulations to be presented to the California Fish and Game Commission on Friday.

Also proposed in the new regulations by the Department of Fish and Game (DFG) are seven "bonus hunts" in Monterey County to reduce deer populations in overcrowded areas.

Public comments on the rules will be accepted before the commission adopts them at its April 27 meeting in Sacramento.

Hunters again would be given deer tags only for one hunting zone in the state, rather than being permitted to hunt throughout California. Permits per zone are limited by the DFG to ease pressure on herds in over-hunted areas and encourage hunting where there is a large deer population.

Monterey County is part of Zone A, where the deer season would run from Aug. 4 to Sept. 16. The proposed limit is two bucks, forked-horn or better. Archery deer season is proposed from July 14-29, with the same limits as for rifle season.

Special hunts of antlerless and either-sex deer are proposed in the county, with limits on the number of permits available. Locations, number of permits and dates are: Fort Ord, 100 permits (50 military), either sex, Sept. 29; 30, Oct. 6-8, 13, 14; Fort Hunter Liggett, 300 permits (150 military), antlerless, same dates as Fort Ord; Los Padres, 400 permits, antlerless, Sept. 1-16; Monterey Archery, 600 permits, either sex, Oct. 13-28; Monterey private lands, 450 permits, antlerless, Sept. 1-23; Rana Creek, 100 permits, antlerless, Oct. 20-22, 27-29, Nov. 3-5, 10-12; and Camp Roberts, 100 permits (50 military), antlerless, Sept. 1-9.

Wild pig season would remain open year 'round, with a limit of one pig per day, one in possession.

Comments on the proposed regulations can be directed to the commission in person at its March 30 meeting in Redding, April 27 in Sacramento, or by mail to the Department of Fish and Game, 1416 Ninth St., Sacramento, 95814.

Information about the regulations is available by telephoning the department office in Monterey at 649-2870.

COUNCIL SUSPENDS LOCAL FIRM'S LICENSE DOES THE REMOVAL of import labels from foreign-made merchandise constitute sales fraud?

The Carmel City Council, sitting as a quasi-judicial body at Wednesday's meeting, took action on a complaint by a honeymoon couple who described circumstances surrounding the purchase of a porcelain figurine from a Carmel gallery.

The gallery owner had "reduced" the figurine from $90 to $32 but the couple, becoming suspicious, had it appraised at a nearby shop at $7.50 wholesale. The seller had also implied that the object had been imported from Italy when the country was actually Japan.

The City Council suspended the business license for a period of 15 days by a unanimous vote.

'How the Other Half Loves' comedy opens tonight at Carmel High School

How the Other Half Loves, a fast-paced comedy by Alan Ayckbourn, opens Thursday, March 1 at 8 p.m. in the Carmel High School Pawnshop Theatre. Additional performances are scheduled March 2-3 and March 8-10 and 15-16.

Ayckbourn, called England's Neil Simon, uses a complex time-space framework to carry out his plot. Two couples—Frank and Fiona Foster and Bob and Terri Phillips—are on stage at the same time, their respective flats integrated into one set. Phillips works for Foster and is eager for advancement, but he has also been courting the boss's wife and returns after an evening with her.

In need of an alibi, Phillips introduces a third couple, the dull but dependable Detweilers and the play takes off from there.

Roles have been double cast. Erin Gafill, Patrick Harrop, Tiffany Grant and Jeff Burroughs play the Fosters; Holly Simpson, Tom Finklang, Alana Bernardi and Ralph Verde are the Phillipses; Sue Morris, Scot Vandagriff, Caroline Green and Kirk Stewart portray the Detweilers.

Diana Hardy of the high school drama department directed; assistant director was Carol Bialek.

Tickets are $2 for adults, $1 for students. For reservations, phone 624-1821 between 8 a.m.-4 p.m.

The Pawnshop Theatre is on the high school campus at Highway 1 and Ocean Avenue, Carmel.

The film is a special presentation by Explorama and is not part of the regular series of travel-adventure films. Producer Jens Bjerre, Danish anthropologist, author and filmmaker, will personally narrate the documentary.

The Carmel performance is sold out. Patrons who may have purchased tickets several months ago are reminded not to miss the show.

The public is welcome to join the day-long activities beginning at 10 a.m. on the private school campus, Forest Lake Road, Pebble Beach. The gate fees to enter Del Monte Forest will be waived for those who attend.

The bazaar in Reed Hall and its surrounding grounds will offer boutique items, furniture, plants, books and fresh produce among other wares. Lunch will be served at an International Cafe and a bakery booth will be open all day.

A super carnival is planned by R.L.S. students to entertain young guests. The school auditorium will be open throughout the day to permit preview examination of items scheduled to go on the block in the Grand Auction. Bids will be accepted in a silent auction.

A wine tasting presented by Almaden Vineyards and a continuation of silent auction bidding is planned from 5-6 p.m. with a Polynesian dinner served at 6 p.m. in Reed Hall. Coffee and dessert will be served in the auditorium, where the Grand Auction will start at 7:45 p.m. Cost of the dinner is $10.75 per person; however, guests need not have dinner to attend the auction.

Butterfield and Butterfield will conduct the auction, which will offer items from the Neil F. Buckley estate, trips to Hawaii and Mexico, a car, three sets of tickets to the King Tut exhibit at the De Young Museum in San Francisco and other treasures.

Proceeds from Big Day are used to support the educational programs at Robert Louis Stevenson School.

'Music from Marlboro' program planned Sat.

Music from Marlboro, a program of chamber music by six members of the acclaimed Marlboro Music Festival in Vermont, will be performed Saturday, March 3 at 8 p.m., in Sunset Theater, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The concert is the fourth of the 1978-79 season sponsored by the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula.

Several chamber groups from the Marlboro Festival are touring the country this year. The group to play in Carmel includes Rudolph Vrbsky, oboe; Isidore Cohen, violin; Bayla Keyes, violin; Ira Weller, viola; Jerry Grossman, cello; and Judith Serkin, cello. The musicians have all performed extensively in the United States and abroad as soloists and members of orchestras and chamber groups.

The Carmel program will include the String Quintet in G major, Op. 20, No. 4, G. 292 by Boccherini; the Quartet in F major for Oboe and Strings, K. 370 by Mozart; and the String Quintet in C major, Op. 163, D. 956 by Schubert.

Since their inception in 1965, the Music from Marlboro concerts have been praised for high artistic excellence. At the Marlboro Music Festival, outstanding musicians from all over the United States and many foreign countries are brought together for two months each summer to exchange ideas and explore the vast repertoire of chamber music.

The Marlboro Festival was founded in 1950 by the renowned musical families Serkin, Busch and Moysé. The festival affords professional musicians the opportunity to study and play in an informal setting removed from the pressures of concert life. Many outstanding American ensembles trace their origins to summers in Marlboro.

Balcony seat tickets will be available at the box office the evening of the concert. For further information, phone 625-0658.

Tael Thomas will read his poetry Friday

Tael Thomas, a part-time philosophy teacher and full-time poet, will present Word Wizardry, an evening of poetry and other sounds, Friday, March 2, 8 p.m. at the Carl Cherry Foundation, Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel. His appearance, co-sponsored by the Poetic Drama Institute and the Cherry Foundation, is his fourth local appearance.

Thomas has appeared in the San Francisco Bay Area and Central California for the past three years, alone or with other poets and musicians. He reads his own poetry combined with work by Yeats, Lorca, Hart Crane, Louise Bogan, Robert Graves and others, interspersed with Hawaiian war chants, coyote howls and tall tales.

The result is "the creation of an environmental totality in which poetry becomes dance and music and the drama of poetic language seems perfectly at home on the theatrical stage," according to Dan Gotch, Poetic Drama Institute founder. Thomas is scheduled to return April 20.

Tickets for the performance are $2.50. For reservations or information, phone 624-7491.

Monterey County SPCA issues plea to pet owners

The Monterey County SPCA has issued its annual plea to pet owners to help stop unwanted puppies and kittens.

Each spring, from May through July, the SPCA shelter on the Monterey-Salinas Highway is filled with unwanted kittens and puppies whose owners did not have the parents spayed or neutered. Of the 3,500 young animals received last spring, only 500 found homes.

The SPCA recommends that pet owners spay or neuter their dogs and cats when they reach six months of age. The operation for both sexes are simple and safe. Your own veterinarian or the SPCA low-cost spay-neuter clinic can perform the operations. Spaying can often be performed on females that are already pregnant.

For information on pet population control phone 373-2631.

NEW-AGE ARCHITECT Paolo Soleri (left) and Ram Dass, former Harvard University professor, are two speakers at Transition 21 ... the Emerging 21st Century. The two-day conference is scheduled Saturday and Sunday, March 3-4 at the Monterey Conference Center.

'Transition 21' convenes at Conference Center

Transition 21, a crash course in surviving into the 21st century, will convene for two days of lecture-seminars Saturday and Sunday, March 3-4 at the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey. The conference, sponsored by University of California Extension, Santa Cruz, will conclude with a second weekend of discussion March 31-April 1.

Dr. Irving Oyle, a physician and coordinator of the conference, looks to the 21st century and believes it will be good. He bases his optimism on recent scientific discoveries that indicate a time lies ahead when man may be able to tell his healthy cells to destroy cancer cells ... when man will move from earth into full space life ... when he will live 150 productive years and achieve many times what he does today.

Scientists whose work will make these achievements possible will explain their discoveries and how they will affect our lives at Transition 21 ... the Emerging 21st Century.

The focus March 3-4 is on Reality Reconsidered, an examination of the "new" reality and its implications in everyday life. Saturday morning meetings are titled From Atomism to Holism.

William W. Harman, Ph.D., of Stanford University, will speak on The Winds of Change. Harman is author of An Incomplete Guide to the Future, on the cataclysmic changes sweeping the 20th century.

The Change of Perception and the Perception of Change is the topic of Heinz Von Foerster, Ph.D., internationally respected biomathematician, who poses the intriguing idea that the observer and the observed are not two entities but one.

Part II: The Beast and its Creation is the subject of Saturday afternoon lecturers.

Anthropologist Lionel Tiger, Ph.D., author of The Imperial Animal, will discuss Our Creature Heritage and examine the schism developing between our ingenuity and our humanity.

New-age architect Paolo Soleri will reflect on new approaches to the physical structure of cities and societies in The Structures in Which We Live.

Human Consciousness and Brain Structure is Part III, which begins Sunday morning with Karl Pribram, M.D., discussing The Hologram in the Head, a holographic theory of brain function. His fellow physician, Joseph Bogen, M.D., will follow with The Other Side of the Brain: An Apositional Mind.

Sunday afternoon begins Part IV: Perceiving the Perceiver and introduces Richard Alpert, Ph.D. (Ram Dass), who will describe A Voyage of Discovery. The former Harvard University psychologist will discuss his evolution to spiritual spokesperson.

Psychologist Jean Houston, Ph.D., will explore The Transformation of Consciousness, tapping our unused potential to conclude the weekend.

The second weekend will take A Voyage of Discovery to look into living in space, conscious evolution, the nature of the universe, spirituality and technology.

Interested persons may attend one or both conferences. Non-credit fees are $50 for each conference or $80 for both; credit fees are $60 and $100.

For information, phone University of California Extension in Santa Cruz, 408-429-2971.

Black rolls 5-5. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

There is no problem about playing this number tidily. For two of the 5's, you can bring the man from the White 10-point to the Black 5-point. The other two 5's can be used either to bring home the two men on the 8-point or the two on the 10-point. The question is: Does Black want to concentrate on playing safely at this point?

Obviously, the trouble is the Black runner on White's 2-point. It is quite probable that, on his next roll, White will make another point in his home board, thereby extending the blockade of the trapped Black runner. Meanwhile, White has plenty of time to free the man on the Black 1-point, for even if he doesn't roll a 3 or a 6 right away, he still has a free man on Black's bar-point to play if he rolls a number that might prove awkward to play with the men in his own half of the board.

Therefore, Black's objective should be to make it as difficult as possible for White to improve his board, and at the same time give him as much chance as possible to free the runner. The first step in accomplishing that is to hit the blot on the Black 1-point with a man from the 6-point. Two of the remaining 5's should be used to bring a man from the White 10-point to the Black 5-point, and for the last 5 I suggest a move that you might think odd—bring a man from the 8-point to the 3-point!

That seems to leave an additional blot, but that is not really the case. You are increasing your builders while only leaving one additional number that hits, since you are duplicating 1's. The only number with which White hits that he would not have been able to do so otherwise is 4-4.

As against that, Black's chances of improving his game can take a sudden upturn. It is by no means sure that White will come in. If he comes in and doesn't hit, he won't be able to make a point in his home board and he will still have at least one blot. And even if he comes in and hits, his home board is not yet strong; and if Black can come in and secure a point in White's home board, he will still be better off than before he hit.

ARTHUR GOODWIN WILD

Arthur Goodwin Wild, a former Pacific Telephone executive, died Saturday of last week at Community Hospital following a lengthy illness. A 22-year resident of Carmel, he was 81 years old.

Wild was born in Williamstown, Mass. He was a graduate of Williams College in Williamstown, and was, at one time, employed by Standard Oil of China, and was stationed in Chungking from 1920-1925. He retired from the phone company 11 years ago.

He was an accomplished poet and following his retirement had verse published in the Wall Street Journal and Sports Illustrated and other periodicals. He was also a serious student of Eastern philosophy, and taught himself Sanskrit to better appreciate original manuscripts.

Wild is survived by his widow, Beatrice, his wife of 53 years; sons, Norman, of San Jose, and Arthur, of Long Beach; brother, H. Douglas Wild of Ojai, and four grandchildren.

Memorial services were private. Cremation was under the direction of the California Cremation Society, with his ashes scattered at sea.

Contributions in his memory should be made to the donor's favorite charity.

LESTER ROWNTREE

Lester Rowntree, a renowned naturalist, died Wednesday of last week at Carmel Convalescent Hospital. A 53-year resident of Carmel Highlands, she was 100 years old.

Mrs. Rowntree, known as the "seed lady" because she collected seeds from all over California and the U.S. and sent them world-wide to various botanical gardens, arboreta and friends, was born in Penrith, England.

She came to this country at the age of 8 with her family who had bought a farm in Kansas. Her formal schooling was completed at the Westtown Friends School in Westtown, Penn. She graduated in 1902, and, at the time of her death, was the school's oldest alumna.

She was born Gertrude Ellen Lester, and married Bernard Rowntree, an American, in 1920. She retained dual citizenship in both this country and her native England. The couple built a house in the Carmel Highlands in 1926; they were divorced in 1930. Her husband served several terms on the Carmel City Council.

Mrs. Rowntree was one of the first environmentalists who recognized the danger of modern society to the ecology. She lectured widely on this and other related topics, and wrote a regular column for the Los Angeles Times. She was also the author of two books on ecology and botany, numerous articles in scientific journals, and several children's books.

The University of California will publish her memoirs this spring and produce a documentary on her life.

She was a member of many groups, including life president of the California Natural Plant Society; president of the American Herb Society; secretary of the British Alpine society; honorary member of the Desert Protective Society and the American Rock Garden Association, and several others.

On her last birthday, Friday, Feb. 16, she received cards from all over the world and from the Queen of England and Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

She is survived by her son, Cedric of Carmel Highlands; three grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

In accordance to Mrs. Rowntree's wishes, there was no memorial service. Cremation was under the direction of the California Cremation Society, with her ashes scattered on the grounds of her Highlands home.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions take the form of donations to the California Native Plant Memorial Fund, 2380 Ellsworth St., Suite D, Berkeley, Calif. 94704.

JEAN BOSSHARDT

Jean Bosshardt, a 48-year resident of Carmel, died Monday of last week at Community Hospital after a short illness. She was 88 years old.

Mrs. Bosshardt was a member of the Carmel Foundation and was very active at one time in the Carmel Woman's Club.

She was born in Des Moines, Iowa.

She is survived by her husband, retired Army Capt. Leslie F. Bosshardt of Carmel; and a niece, Maxine Williams of Seattle, Wash.

Private family services were at the Farlinger Funeral Home.

RUTH ELIZABETH DODDS

Ruth Elizabeth Dodds, a 19-year resident of Carmel Valley, died Thursday of last week at her home after several years of illness. She was 74.

She was born in Sacramento and was a teacher and an authority on curriculum development.

Miss Dodds was a long-time member of the League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women, the honorary educational sorority Delta Kappa Gamma, and the Soroptimists Club of Sacramento. She was selected Woman of the Year by that club in 1960. Deeply involved in politics, she was a member of the California State Central Committee of the Democratic Party and was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention from 1932-1956.

She included among her friends President Harry S. Truman, Adlai Stevenson, Gov. Edmund Brown and Averill Harriman.

Miss Dodds left several cousins, nephews and nieces as survivors.

A memorial service was given Tuesday at the Chapel of East Lawn Cemetery in Sacramento. Cremation was at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove.

Contributions to her memory may be made to the Children's Home Society of California, 444 Pearl St., Monterey.

SPORTS SPECTATOR

By JAY POSNER

CARMEL HIGH varsity baseball coach Monty Feekes is looking to his seniors this year to lead the Padres to a second straight Mission Trail Athletic League championship.

"A lot of great graduating seniors must be replaced this year," Feekes said last week. "Among others, Steve Sepersky, Dave Carpenter, Peter Rolfing, David McKenzie, and Tom and John Frincke had good senior years that contributed immensely to last year's championship. They're the people that the seniors this year must replace in order for us to repeat."

Feekes also said that one of the Padres' main strengths will be their pitching depth. "We have about seven guys that can do the job for us," Feekes said. "John Lucido (who has been named to both the All-MTAL football and basketball teams already this year) and Pat Kelly are both seniors who pitched for us last year, and we also have Dwight Spicher, Buz Fulton, David Spear, Greg Raynes and Bill Kaufman to pitch for us."

Spicher, Fulton and Spear were on the junior varsity last year, while Raynes pitched for the freshman team and Kaufman was on a Colt League team last summer.

The Padre coach also said that the Padres have some excellent hitters on the squad this year. Among those are junior first basemen Mike Wecker and Mike Matson, senior third baseman Neil Vandervort, junior outfielders Mike Odello and Cory Bliesner, and Lucido.

When asked about the MTAL, Feekes said, "The league should have good balance this year because nobody I know of has a pitcher that can stop a team on any given day like Sepersky and Brian Mignano (a RLS pitcher last year) did last year. Sepersky was 12-0 in 1978, while Mignano defeated everybody but us."

"I look for RLS to have a pretty good team this year because some of the players that are on their basketball team (which plays in the Central Coast Section championships this weekend at Stanford), Tony Woods, Ezra Burdix, and Roosevelt Travis, also play on the baseball team. I look for them to be extremely tough if they can find a pitcher to replace Mignano."

Feekes also stated that he looks for Gonzales, Palma, and Pacific Grove to have good teams during the upcoming league season which begins on March 20. Carmel will play the first of four pre-season games on Tuesday, March 6 at El Estero Park against Monterey High.

"We have good quality, but we lack depth," Carmel swim coach Jim Agan said last week about his 1979 team.

The Padres were entered in the Salinas Relays last Saturday, and this Saturday, Carmel will travel to Pacific Grove for the MTAL Relays. The Padres will open the dual meet season Tuesday, March 6, when they host Gilroy High.

Agan also stated that the Padres have many excellent swimmers, but under the present scoring system, have almost no chance to defeat the bigger schools because they don't have enough swimmers to fill out the events. Agan said: "It's like playing basketball with four players when the other team has five."

Agan, who is starting his 20th year of coaching, said that he is looking for strong performances from several swimmers, including Mark Baldwin, Art Strum, diver Rich Gistelli, Tom Agan and Peter Kelly. Baldwin holds two varsity records, while Strum, Kelly, Agan and Baldwin set a record in the 200 free relay last year. Gistelli placed 12th in the CCS finals in 1978 as a junior.

The Padres have been either champions or co-champions of the MTAL for nine out of the past 10 years, losing out only to Pacific Grove two years ago.

As Agan mildly put it, "We've had our share of success."

Healing lecture

Richard Gordon, an innovative polarity therapist, will autograph copies of his new book, Your Healing Hands, and present a free lecture on holistic healing, Saturday, March 3 at 4 p.m. at Mandala Bookshop, 176 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove. Everyone is welcome.

Gordon will demonstrate polarity techniques that are believed to restore energy and health.

Peninsula Churchwomen celebrate World Day of Prayer Friday

Monterey Peninsula Church Women United will celebrate World Day of Prayer with services at Carmel Valley Manor and St. Angela's Catholic Church, Pacific Grove, Friday, March 2.

The Valley service is scheduled for 10 a.m. The service was arranged by Mrs.

L.J. Fletcher of Carmel Valley and includes the service written by students in the Pan-African Leadership Course for Women at Mindolo Ecumenical Foundation in Kitwe, Zambia.

The Pacific Grove service begins at 1 p.m. Msgr. Joseph Stieger, pastor of St. Angela's, will address the service participants. The offering to be taken will go toward global work pertaining to women and children, including clean water projects, handcraft cooperatives and refugees.

All church women are invited to join the celebrations. For additional information, phone 372-0224.

All yours . . . this magnificent view from high above sunny Carmel Valley.

Presenting . . .

A NEW PRIVATE COMMUNITY OF 20 ELEGANT HOMES

This exclusive new neighborhood, high above the sunny Carmel Valley, will be limited to twenty handsome custom homes.

Located on over sixty acres of valuable land, the homesites are carefully placed so that each one has sweeping views of the Valley. More than half of the total property is reserved for scenic easement, with broad open-spaces between homes. So each one is literally an estate.

EXCELLENT SECURITY

Another reassuring feature of the community is its safety from intrusion. The road is strictly private, lighted by decorative lamps all the way. The security gate will admit only residents and their guests.

DESIGNED BY FRED BROOKS

The homes are the creation of national award winner Fred Brooks, who designed Del Mesa Carmel. The elegant houses have exteriors harmonizing with the beautiful countryside. The interiors are spacious and warm, with large fireplaces and broad view-windows.

Each house is custom-tailored to fit the natural terrain. Your home will have its own individual character, designed to suit your needs and wishes. Yet you will live in a coordinated community — all related-caliber homes.

UNDERGROUND UTILITIES

Nothing will mar or obstruct the breathtaking views. Utilities are underground — TV cable, electricity, natural gas and telephone. Attractive landscaping enhances the native flora.

EARLY REVIEW IS URGED

Three homes are already under construction. Prospective buyers are urged to act promptly because of the limited number of homesites. The homes start at $250,000.

HOW TO GET THERE

Only 20 minutes from Carmel. Take Carmel Valley Road to Rancho Road (at Los Laureles Lodge), turn left onto Rancho, then right onto Middle Canyon Road to entry. Office on site open daily from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., including weekends.

A WOLF HAS BEEN HERE!

To lovers of nature, as even to Olaus Murie, great mammalogist, to see a wolf track, to know that a wolf "has been here," is to share, to some extent, in the courage, the age-old wisdom, the great heart, of this most magnificent creature. Engraved on heavy, handsome, sterling silver jewelry, ARAVIC presents Murie's own reproduction of a wild wolf track... rings, pins, pendants, earrings. See them at ARAVIC's Ecology Corner, in Carmel Valley. Open every afternoon but Sunday.

2 BDRMS., STUDIO, NEAR TOWN AND BEACH

This jewel of a home is beautifully located about 5 blocks to the beach and 5 blocks to the Pine Inn. Part is old, part is fairly new and all is absolutely charming. There's a detached studio at the front of the property and the house has 1½ baths. Roofs and siding are wood shingle. The house is at the back of a beautifully but informally landscaped lot. There's a fireplace in the cozy living room. Super value at $169,500.

2 BDRMS., 2 BATHS + STUDIO & BATH

This is a super, traditional home in the Mid-Valley area, situated near tennis courts, golf courses and stables. The completely fenced grounds are beautifully landscaped, and have several bearing fruit trees. The detached, contemporary Artist's Studio has skylights and dramatic, floor-to-high-ceiling windows. It could be a guest house as it has its own bath. The main house has 2 master bedroom suites, beamed ceilings, excellent storage space. Part of the oversized, attached, completely-finished double garage can be converted to another bedroom and bath and STILL leave a double garage. It's a pleasure to show at $225,000.

4 BDRMS., GUEST HOUSE, HUGE LOT NEAR TOWN

This is a small estate on about a two-thirds acre parcel of land 6 blocks south of Ocean Ave., an easy walk to the Village. The property has 3 baths, separate dining room, family room and a 1-bedroom guest house with bath and fireplace. The house has random-width, oak plank, pegged floors, shake roof, patios, wood and brick exterior. It's a beautifully-built, older (but not old) Carmel home in a beautiful oak-studded setting. It's secluded yet almost in town. Outstanding value at $295,000.

2-BDRM. CARMEL CONDOMINIUM, $135,000

This 4-year-old unit in High Meadow is in really beautiful condition. It has 1½ baths, fireplace, deck and good storage. The area has a pool and 2 tennis courts. Owner will consider a trade for vacant land. Shown any time.

1 BDRM. WITH CHARM & A STUDIO, $135,000

This little jewel has one of the nicest living rooms we've seen in a small Carmel cottage. It has beamed-ceilings, and a large, concave, stone corner fireplace. There's a separate dining room, an updated kitchen and the detached studio has a full bath. It's a super charmer.

3 BDRMS. WITH SPECTACULAR OCEAN VIEW

Situated high on a hill with an unparalleled view of Point Lobos and the Fish Ranch, this house is one of the finest examples of contemporary architecture in the area. Built entirely of brick, the house features a spacious living room with a 21' high ceiling, dining room, family room, breakfast room, den, 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths. Finished with meticulous care, the house abounds with teak veneer built-in cabinets, and the matching room doors are set in solid teak frames. Copper piping is used throughout the house, and there is a recirculating loop and pump for instant hot water at all faucets. Offered at $350,000. Exclusive.

CARMEL LOT NEAR TOWN & BEACH

One of the few vacant lots available. It's priced at $119,500; it even has a little ocean view. What more can you say but "Where?" Call and we'll be delighted to tell you.

LIKE-NEW, 2-BDRM., 2-BATH NEAR TOWN

In fact, only 3 short blocks to the business district. This is a completely remodeled home in a wooded setting. The roof, plumbing, heating and electrical systems are either new or meet current code. An attractive home for $139,500.

Must a cottage be small?

This one isn't, yet you'll agree it is a cottage. Some day it would be fun to count the windows in it. Or better yet, the panes of glass. All those that open are casements, and each has 4 or 6 little panes. The doors have 10 each.

The house is wood throughout. Board and batten in bedrooms, halls, kitchen and dining area; cedar panelling and beams in the high-vaulted living room. Floors are dark-stained white oak, walls are painted or lime-stained.

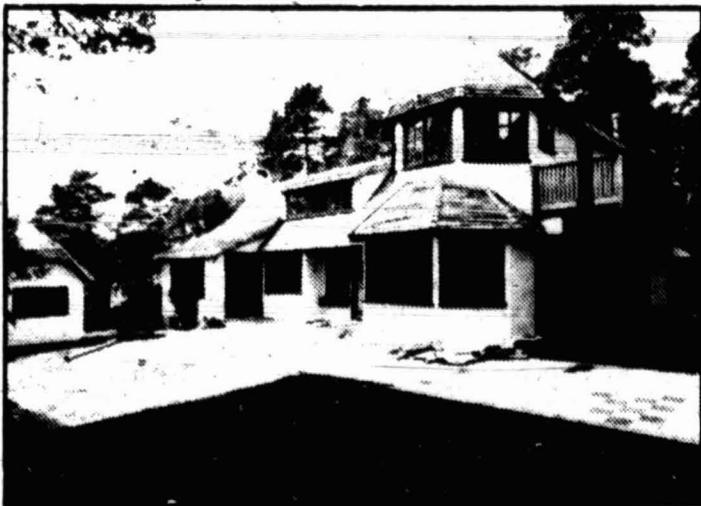

The Comstock marks are most evident in the living room. Peak roof, beams, one side sweeping gracefully down across curved rafters. Eleven windows and 2 French doors — exactly 100 small panes! A great Carmel stone fireplace. And across from it, a stair rising along the wall past landings to a balcony that leads through an arched door to the master bedroom.

This occupies well over half the upper floor, reaching from side to side. On the north wall, another stone fireplace with raised hearth. On the south, a row of casements from which you catch a bit of the sea. At the far end, 2 steps up through an open arch to a short corridor that leads to a rear deck.

Off the hallway, on the left, a huge walk-in dressing room with copious shelves and drawers. And on the right, one of Carmel's most voluptuous baths. It's actually terraced, with shower and lavatory up one step, and on a higher level, a vast mahogany counter in the middle of which is the tub. Casement windows surround it in this turret room, so one can luxuriate in perfect privacy while viewing the ocean some blocks to the west.

We almost missed the kitchen, and that's hard to do because it's just across a counter top from the front door. A third fireplace, all set for natural cooking, dominates the room. Cabinets, shelves and counters ring the kitchen. It might have been lifted intact from a French peasant cottage.

Behind this are 2 more bedrooms, one a turret like the upstairs bath — and very likely an ideal study. A second bath serves this area.

Outside it's pure Comstock. Roof shingled in irregular courses, the shingles curling lovingly around the eaves. A detached single garage. A flagstone terrace, Comstock chimneys, a memorable dwelling. All newly remodeled and redecorated. On Dolores Street, east side, between 12th and 13th. $240,000.

Charming cottage close to town

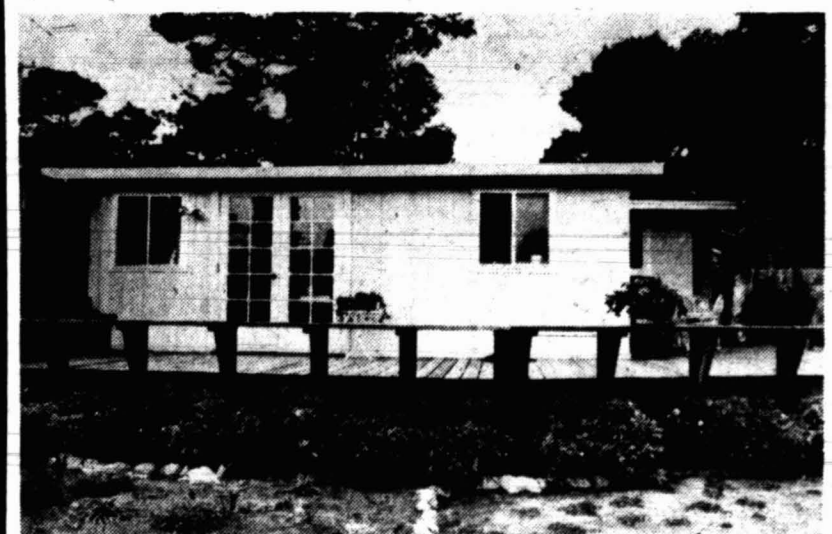

All the early-day charm of Carmel has been preserved and enhanced in recent remodeling of this shingle-roofed cottage a block away from Sunset Center and only five blocks south of Ocean Avenue.

In the bay-windowed living room, careful craftsmanship of native materials including pine paneling in walls and ceiling, also the stone of the mantled fireplace, are resultant aspects of remodeling as are, too, clerestory windows and new carpeting.

Pine cabinets, butcher block counters, custom tile floor, microwave and selfcleaning ovens, also harmonizing appliances, are new features of the kitchen with delightful, windowed dining alcove.

From doors opening to the master bedroom suite with tile-floored, skylighted bathroom, a wide, newly added deck curves around the rear of the house to another door opening from the kitchen thus providing outdoor dining as well as relaxation areas. A second pine-paneled bedroom, another attractive, tile-floored bath and skylighted hallway complete the interior. Just a few steps across a primrose-bordered, sheltered, paved patio is the garage with laundry and storage facilities. Price of this charming cottage, close to town is $148,500.

WOMEN ARE NOT EXEMPTED from serving on the three Carmel Chapter ambulances. Among the most active are Martha Wright, Tori Chesebrough and Lois Farber. They must be trained in the same techniques as are the men volunteers and respond under the same system. The women claim they can scramble down the cliffs just as fast as the men, "so long as we wear our boots."

MRS. PAUL ROOT (Marylou), chapter Blood Service chairman stands in front of the chapter's Honor Roll of Blood Donors. Every name on the board means that individual has donated a gallon or more of blood throughout the years. The Bloodmobile from the American Red Cross Central California Blood Center located in San Jose visits the Carmel area six times a year, twice to Carmel Valley and four to Carmel. The next scheduled bloodmobile is for Thursday, March 15 at Crespi Hall (in back of the Carmel Mission). Blood is always needed by patients. Mrs. Thomas B. McKiernon is recruitment chairman in Carmel Valley.

"RECORDING-ANNE" a fairly recent acquisition to the chapter's CPR-BLS (Cardiopulmonary Basic Life Support) training service rests between drills at a recent CPR-BLS instructor session in the chapter house. Barbara R. Chamberlain of Big Sur and Joel Readio of Carmel Valley are the instructor-trainers in first aid courses.

TORI CHESEBROUGH of Big Sur, a member of the Big Sur volunteer ambulance crew and a first aid instructor, responds to many of the emergency calls for the ambulance. Among the most frequent are those of cars going "over the cliff," according to Tori.

THE CARMEL CHAPTER offers a Small Craft Program which includes courses in rowing, canoeing, outboard boating and sailing. At the Carmel High School pool, American Red Cross boating instructor Bob Brooks points out the rudiments of rigging a sail on a small boat to Sara Thames and Maria Cramer, while in the background, Edward Calderon sails around the pool. Bob Walthour, another high school teacher, is also a certified Red Cross Small Craft instructor.

Sharing available water would limit growth here

By KEN PETERSON

GROWTH IN CARMEL Valley and the Carmel area would be restricted sharply under proposals for local governments to share available water to avert a shortage before the turn of the century.

Projections in a Monterey Peninsula Water Management District study presented Feb. 13 are that the Peninsula will be out of water for the California-American Water Co. service area by 1993 if growth continues at its present rate and no new sources of water are developed.

The report, prepared by the district for the California Coastal Commission, recommends that Monterey County and the six cities in the district agree to divide up the supplies and then plan their short-term development based on how much water they receive.

The district board of directors will discuss the report at a public hearing on Tuesday, March 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the Seaside City Hall.

Without any restrictions on water, the population of Carmel will probably grow to 6,500 people by the turn of the century, according to Planning Director Bob Griggs. The current population of the city is 4,780 permanent residents.

The 35 percent rise in population would increase water demand in Carmel by 40 percent, according to the water district study. The city now uses 896 acre-feet of water per year. It would need 1,257 acre-feet annually by the year 2000 if its population grows as predicted.

Griggs said he believes that is "a realistic projection" for the future. He anticipates much of the growth will come in the form of apartment construction.

THE UNINCORPORATED area of Monterey County included in the study is not divided into specific areas such as Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach or Carmel Highlands. It is estimated that water demand for the entire area will increase 37 percent to 7,454 acre-feet annually by 2000.

Growth when the entire area is developed to its present zoning capacity would require 28,357 acre-feet of water—more than is available from the Los Padres and San Clemente dams, the Carmel Valley aquifer and the Seaside aquifer combined.

With the planned development of four new wells in the Lower Carmel Valley, Cal-Am could produce a maximum of 22,000 acre-feet of water. This maximum figure was accepted by the California Public Utilities Commission last year when it ended the drought-era ban on new water connections by Cal-Am.

Cal-Am said at that time that 22,000 acre-feet of water would be adequate to serve the needs of its customers even if all vacant land were fully developed.

But according to the water district study, Cal-Am customers will require 25,683 acre-feet of water annually by the year 2000.

The total demand in the water management district, including customers outside of Cal-Am's present service boundaries is projected to be 27,657 acre-feet per year by the year 2000.

Projections in the report show an even more serious problem when all available land in the water district is developed at some undetermined date in the future. Water demand in the Cal-Am boundaries would be 44,930 acre-feet per year, more than double the capacity of the company. For the water management district as a whole, demand is estimated at 57,810 acre-feet per year.

WHILE BOARD MEMBERS and planning officials, who provided data for the study, said specific population and water demand projections have a wide margin of error, they agree with the basic conclusion of the report. The study concludes that the present water supply system cannot possibly meet the pressure imposed by increasing growth in the region.

According to Bruce Buel of the Seaside Planning Department, even the short-range estimate has an error factor of 33 percent. The estimated demand could be one-third higher or lower than the projection.

Buel compiled the report for the district using information from other planning agencies in the county.

Despite the margin of error, he said it is "just about as accurate as anything we can hang our hat on."

The main error which Buel admitted, is that the projection is based on maximum growth in Carmel Valley within the existing one-unit-per-acre zoning.

Dave Young of the Monterey County planning department, calls that estimate "ridiculous."

"That'll never happen," he said. "It's based on erroneous assumptions."

Particularly in the Carmel Valley, Young said, "Zoning hasn't been a valid assumption for some time now and will be less so in the future."

What the actual growth will be in the long run "is guesswork," he said.

Water district board member William Woodworth agrees.

"I don't place much faith in those figures. I don't trust the data," he said.

Woodworth said that assuming water demand is greater than the supply, the difference could be made up by reclaiming wastewater or capturing more rain runoff in cisterns for irrigation use.

Half of the water supply could come from those sources in the future, he believes.

Supervisor Michal Moore of Monterey, who chairs the water district board, said the district had to plan for a "worst case" situation in the report.

"It was the only assumption we could make in a limited study," he said. "It may be off, but it's still a useful planning tool."

"It's a crapshoot," admitted Buel. "The immediate thing the district is requesting is growth management techniques to stretch out the demand."

IN ADDITION to the forecasts of water supply and demand, the report contains model ordinances which would apportion the water among each city in the district and unincorporated Monterey County land. Each entity would manage its own growth as it sees fit within the restrictions of set maximums on the amount of water it receives.

The water-sharing ordinances would be voluntary. They are still being drafted and must be accepted by all the water district communities before they could go into effect.

By publicizing the water supply data and pressing cities and the county to voluntarily limit growth, Buel believes the Monterey Peninsula "can stay within its resources instead of running wild until we bump up against the resource limit" and growth halts abruptly.

"There has to be agitation for massive general plan revisions," Moore said. This is essential to ensure that growth takes place in an orderly fashion, he added.

Carmel Valley is going through that process now. The revised master plan being developed for the Valley would allow 2,500 new residences over the next 20 years at an annual rate of about 125 per year.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors expects to have a growth management plan and a target annual growth rate by the end of 1979. The Carmel Valley Master Plan should be adopted at the same time.

The county growth management policy will probably use limits on natural resources as one factor in deciding how much growth a given area should get.

The model ordinance proposed by the water management district would determine natural resource limitations for Monterey Peninsula water users.

The supply and demand study offers nine different ways to divide up water among cities and the county. The different political entities will have to agree on both the ordinance and the allocation formula before they take effect.

A second ordinance would require stringent conservation features in all water fixtures added once the law is on the books. It includes restrictions on the number of gallons-per-flush in toilets and on the flow rate in sink and shower faucets.

It also would require metered or self-closing faucets on public drinking fountains and rest room sinks; recycling devices for car wash water systems, swimming pools and ornamental fountains; timed meters on showers in hotels to cut off water after five minutes (it could be turned on again manually); and limits on the amount of paved areas allowed in new subdivisions to limit surface runoff.

Board doesn't like pedicabs for Carmel

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

IT WILL PROBABLY be a long, long time before pedicabs traverse the streets of Carmel.

Three weeks ago, a Merced businessman said he wanted to bring 20 of the three-wheeled, rickshaw-like carts to Carmel. Drivers of the bicycle-powered cabs would whisk tourists and residents around Carmel much like similar vehicles in Honolulu and in the Orient.

But not in Carmel—as far as the Carmel Business License Review Board and some Carmel city councilmen are concerned.

The city has the power to regulate "and probably prohibit" pedicabs, City Attorney George Brehmer said at the board meeting on Feb. 22.

No further city action is expected until Billy L. Slimp, president of Sunshine Pedicab, makes his next move.

Slimp has not yet applied for a business license which is mandatory before he can get into that kind of a hassle," he said.

Slimp said he is eyeing Scenic Road as a prime spot for the pedicabs.

"That would ruin Scenic for the people who live there ..." Collins countered. He suggested that Slimp take his proposal to Monterey or Pacific Grove.

THE PEDICABS can hold two passengers. They would be rented to student drivers, who would transport passengers for a fee. Slimp said he wants access to all Carmel streets.

Advertising would be low-key, Slimp promised. He said he had "no intentions" of putting up signs in town. He also has no thoughts of selling advertising space on the carts, he said. That is the practice in Honolulu. "I didn't think I'd have much luck with that here," he stated.

"The most serious problem," Collins said, "is a commercial enterprise operating outside the commercial district."

"Who has jurisdiction over Scenic?" Slimp asked.

"The city does," Collins replied.

"Who owns Scenic?" Slimp asked.

"The city does," Collins repeated.

A hot dog stand operator could ask for the same commercial privilege, Collins maintained.

"It would be pretty hard to have a hot dog stand in the street," Slimp argued.

"No it's not," Collins answered.

The "big hitch," said Ellis, is where the unhired pedicabs would be based. They could clog up traffic spaces. "We don't even allow taxi stands in this town," he pointed out.

But Carmel taxicabs operate in the residential district, Slimp said.

"Why don't you put all the taxis out of business?" Slimp asked.

Taxis provide a "significantly" different service" than would pedicabs, answered Brehmer. "Residents go to banks in taxis. I don't think they'd do it in pedicabs," he said.

"There is no question that the city can regulate (pedicabs) very extensively ... and probably prohibit them. You have a big job of selling this," Brehmer said.

Frederick Stanley, a Carmel Business Association representative on the board, said: "It would be a hard nut to crack economically."

THREE CARMEL COUNCILMEN contacted later last week don't like the idea.

"It sounds to me like the man is using the city as a platform to launch his commercial venture," said Councilman Howard Brunn. Municipal minibuses "would serve the town a lot better," Brunn suggested.

It will bring in the "wrong kind" of visitors, said Councilman Mike Brown. "I can't imagine someone buying a fancy painting, then carting it around in a rickshaw. But I can picture someone with an ice cream sucker wanting to ride in one," he stated.

"I don't think it will work as a business," said Councilman Leslie Gross. "I don't have much feeling one way or the other," he added.

Slimp, who owns a home in Carmel Valley, originally proposed the pedicab idea here at a Feb. 8 board meeting. Discussion was continued until last Thursday. He said pedicabs would conform to all Carmel traffic laws and would transport senior citizens at special times without charge.

operate here. If he does apply, that will set in motion a legal study by Brehmer.

Legal questions perplexed board members last week. Most of their queries went unanswered. It is still not known if the carts would have the legal right-of-way in residential areas. Possible traffic and safety problems also worried the board.

SLIMP REFUSED to state after the meeting if he intends to apply for a business license.

When the Pine Cone asked him if he will apply, he said, "I have no comment."

Asked again, Slimp replied, "Consult my attorney." Asked for his attorney's name, he replied, "I have no comment," and then walked away.

The board opinion was summed up by Carmel Police Chief William Ellis. "The idea has merit, but not for Carmel. In our hearts, we all know what the council would do."

Three councilmen told the Pine Cone last week they might object to pedicabs here. All wanted to hear more details of the proposal.

Regardless of council action, Slimp hinted he is prepared to fight City Hall. "I'm only asking this, so don't get uptight. But what if I comply with every law? How can you stop me?" he asked the board.

Slimp was upset with negative responses from all four board members present. When Collins told him his business "would not comply with the law," Slimp grew angry.

"I could fight it," he responded. "That's okay. They did it in Honolulu. I can get every bicycle club in the county to speak for me. For every person who speaks against it, I could find four in favor. But I don't want to

Newly-elected CVPOA board member resigns

One of the newly-elected members of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association board of directors resigned before taking his seat on the board.

Chris Keehn, a builder serving on the Carmel Valley Master Plan Committee, resigned because a job commitment in Los Angeles will keep him away from the area for the next four months.

CVPOA President Douglas Despard said the board of directors will appoint a successor to Keehn at its March 21 meeting. Interested individuals can telephone John Broberg at 659-2850 if they wish to be considered for the post.

The directors also agreed at their Feb. 21 session to meet with landowner Barbara Mark to discuss a possible reduction in size for the 55-room "resort condominium" development she

New dam site tour for directors

Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board members will discuss construction of a new dam on the Carmel River and tour the site of the proposed dam Monday afternoon.

The directors will meet at 1 p.m. in the conference room of the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments, 23845 Holman Highway, Carmel.

The dam, proposed as a new source of water for the Monterey Peninsula as well as to increase flood protection in the Carmel Valley, would be located near the site of the present San Clemente Dam.

President Carter is requesting $255,000 in his 1980 budget to complete planning studies for the dam. The project would be handled by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

proposes in Carmel Valley Village.

"We've got to come up with some constructive suggestions," Despard said.

Director Earl Moser said his main concern is sewage disposal on the 10-acre property.

"We are working up to a situation in Carmel Valley where there will be contamination of the underground aquifer, and then I don't know what will happen," Moser said.

The CVPOA now has 1,063 members, according to Director Peggy Arnold. The organization has a balance of almost $10,000 in checking and savings accounts.

Some of that money will pay for recent advertisements in connection with the appeal by the organization of use permits for development of Carmel Valley Ranch.

Treasurer Robert Marble suggested that the board consider increasing membership dues. The matter will be discussed at the next board meeting.

Father Farrell's wisdom

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

The Feb. 21 invocation delivered to the Carmel Rotary Club

RECENTLY I met a young man in his late 40s (which is young in my book). He was losing a luxurious mop of hair and it was crushing his pride and undermining his machismo.

By way of advice I quoted from the folk philosopher Alice Hegan Rice who wrote Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch in the 1890s. When Mrs. Wiggs' young nephew told her he was going bald, she said, "Listen lad, just thank God your hair don't act up like your teeth and each hair begins to ache before it falls out. I didn't never counted the hair on a man's head but I figger he's got a lot more hair than teeth so stop lookin' like you jest ate a sack of green apples. Did ya ever think ya coulda bin born with hair, a hare lip, that is. Now git down to the patch and pick me a head a cabbage—it's got less hair than you got but it's got jest about as much sense."

Logging company to pursue plans to fell 375 redwoods

A NORTHERN CALIFORNIA logging company will pursue plans to harvest 375 redwood trees in Carmel Valley.

A consultant will be hired by the company in the next few weeks to prepare an environmental impact report on the project.

The Monterey County Planning Commission ordered the EIR last November on the proposal by Westbrook Land and Timber Co. to cut the trees on a 66-acre parcel in Williams Canyon, an area on the south side of Carmel Valley and surrounded by Rancho San Carlos. Access to the property is from Rancho San Carlos Road, about three miles east of Highway 1 along Carmel Valley Road.

Opponents of the proposal argued before the commission that the timber operations would scar the landscape and create traffic problems when logging trucks travel on Carmel Valley Road and Highway 1 from the property.

Hank Westbrook, a spokesman for the logging firm from Del Norte County, countered that the estimated 1.5 million to 2 million board feet of lumber the trees would yield is needed for housing construction.

The EIR would have to be completed and certified by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors before Westbrook Land can apply for a use permit to cut the trees.

Parents appalled at school cuts

WITH PARENTS calling for defiance of the state legislature and a march on Sacramento, the Carmel Unified School District board of trustees voted Tuesday night to consider layoffs of 21 teachers next fall to balance the district's budget.

The trustees also established a citizens' committee to review $728,000 in budget cuts suggested by District Superintendent Carl Wilsey to cope with what he called the "dire financial straits" of the district.

Included in the package of potential cuts is $472,000 in layoffs of teachers, administrators and non-teaching personnel. Layoff notices will go out to teachers by March 15.

Besides the cut of 21 of the district's 155 teaching positions, 13 non-teaching staff members would be dismissed along with two administrators if the contingency plan is needed to bring Carmel's $6 million budget into balance.

Non-staff cuts under review include eliminating the busing program or charging parents for school transportation and ending the subsidy for high school band and athletics.

Other possible reductions would involve closing Carmelo and Carmel Woods schools and selling vacant land bought by the district years ago for future school sites.

The citizens' committee reviewing the cuts will be organized next week and will hold public meetings between now and this summer in an effort to find ways to cut the district budget.

THE OVERWHELMING sentiment

among parents, teachers, students and district residents Tuesday was opposition to any cuts in program or teaching staff. The layoff package grudgingly considered by the trustees would require a cutback to five periods per day for high school and middle school students.

Time and again, people in the audience of more than 200 crowded into the Middle School library asked the board to take a stand that the cuts are intolerable and that the legislature must provide more money for education to make up for property tax losses under Proposition 13.

"Somebody's got to say, 'Enough is enough,'" said Chuck Leary of Carmel Valley. "A year from now, what else are you going to cut?"

The district has to tell the legislature, "We won't make personnel and program cuts. We should say we've done all we can and still call this a school system," Leary said.

"The success of our entire democratic process rests on the success of the public school system."

"It may take a march on Sacramento to get it done by June," said high school biology teacher Howard Sanborn. "We can drive our tractors up there and park on the lawn."

SEVERAL SCHOOL bail-out bills are before the legislature now, but according to trustee Richard Wilsdon, none of them would provide enough money to maintain the district's present programs.

"We're not here to find a better way to have a better school system," board

President Clayton Neill Jr. said at the outset of the meeting. "We're looking for ways to dismantle it."

One parent complained that if the district goes ahead with the layoff plans, "we'll spend a great deal more money bringing our students to schools where they won't have anything to take."

As reluctant as the trustees were to leave open the option of layoffs, Wilsdon said there is no other choice at this time.

"If no cut is made, we're bankrupt," he said. "And you can't run a bankrupt school system."

Vivian Clarke weds Mark Brown

Carmel Mission Basilica was the setting for the wedding Saturday of Vivian Monica Clarke and Mark McCabe Brown, both of Carmel.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo C. Clarke of Carmel. A 1976 graduate of Carmel High School, she is presently employed at M. Raggett Inc. in Carmel.

The groom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Brown of Carmel, was a 1974 Carmel High School graduate and now manages Precision Foreign Auto Parts in Monterey.

The bride wore her mother's wedding dress and the wedding band of the groom's mother. The engagement ring that Mark gave Vivian belonged to his maternal grandmother.

Miss Patricia Clarke, the bride's sister, was the matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Richard Calcagno of Monterey, the bride's sister; and Miss Dorie Brown and Miss Julie Brown, sisters of the groom.

The groom's best man was Mark Rudolph of Pacific

Grove; serving as attendants were Leo C. Clarke, the brother of the bride; Arthur M. Plaxton, grandfather to the groom; and Bruce Brown, brother of the groom. Matthew Balesteri was the ringbearer. All are residents of Carmel.

The bride's paternal grandmother, Madame Gabrielle Prime of Paris, France, was the honored guest at the reception at Rancho Canada Golf Club in Carmel Valley.

The newlyweds will live in Pacific Grove following their honeymoon in Palm Springs.

40-unit motel proposed at Garrapata Creek and Highway 1

THE GURRIES MANAGEMENT Co., denied a permit for a motel in Carmel Highlands last summer, has renewed its application to build a 40-unit motel on Highway 1 at Garrapata Creek, 10 miles south of Carmel.

The Gilroy firm, which owns and operates the Tickle Pink Motel in the Highlands, wants to build the project on a 40.5-acre site on the east side of the coast highway. Most of the land would be retained in open space.

An environmental impact report ordered on the project under the original November 1977 application is nearly complete, according to Cathy Stein of the Monterey County Planning Department.

According to the project application, the development would contain four six-unit buildings and two eight-unit structures. A 20-foot maximum building height is planned.

The motel would be served by the Garrapata Water Company and use septic tanks for sewage disposal.

A portion of the property is already zoned for commercial use. According to Kent Singleton, a representative of Gurries Management in Carmel Highlands, the company has planned for several years to build a motel on the site.

The property is now vacant except for an old real estate office occupied as a residence.

The land is directly across Highway 1 from the proposed Garrapata Beach State Park, which would stretch north to Malpas Creek in the Highlands. It also lies within the Coastal Zone. Any county action to approve development on the property would have to be accepted by the Regional Coastal Commission.

Permit approvals for the motel will be heard by Monterey County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon. No hearing date has been scheduled for the project.

A new application for the motel use permit was filed on Feb. 14. It was necessary because the original application requested a special permit for the motel under an interim county ordinance controlling development along the Big Sur coast. That ordinance expired last year and was not extended. All applications pending under the old law were voided; the new application was required.

In addition to the Garrapata Creek site, Gurries Management Co. sought approval for an 18-unit motel on Peter Pan Road in the Highlands last year. That application was denied by the county Board of Supervisors on appeal last August after a substantial number of neighbors complained about potential problems with waste disposal, traffic and the impact of the motel on a residential neighborhood.

Growth management task force to meet every week

THE MONTEREY COUNTY task force on growth management will meet at least once a week for the next two months in order to complete its final report on regulating new development in the county by May 1.

The panel met for the first time last Thursday and agreed to hold regular sessions at 2 p.m. each Thursday until the end of April at the Monterey County courthouse, Church and Alisal streets, Salinas.

The task force meetings are open to the public. To find out the room the task force will meet in each week, telephone Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck's office, 372-7321.

The task force, created by the county Board of Supervisors last month, is charged with several tasks:

- Telling the supervisors if a 1 percent annual growth rate is appropriate for the unincorporated portion of the county.

- Deciding if growth should be apportioned to eight regions of the county as it has occurred historically, or if it should be shifted to areas of slower growth and away from those which have grown more rapidly.

- Finding a way to allow some low-cost housing in the county, possibly a flat percentage of the total growth rate.

- Determining if growth should be limited by the availability of water, sewage treatment, classroom space, roads and other utilities.

- Determining what effects a growth management policy will have on the construction and banking industries in the county.

THE RECOMMENDATIONS will be considered as part of a growth management system the supervisors plan to enact by the end of 1979.

Committee member Joseph Sullivan, chairman of the county Planning Commission, was named chairman of the task force.

The group will hear reports from subcommittees on growth rate, low-cost housing, effects on the construction industry and utility capacity over the next four Thursdays.

It will then get down to the hard business of making specific recommendations to the supervisors.

Supervisor Dusan Petrovic of King City, who attended the first session, told the task force members he wants a report from them explaining where growth should go, how much growth should be permitted and how growth should be phased.

He said his own philosophy is that growth should be limited by the available resources such as water supply, roads and sewers.

In all cases, Petrovic said, "You should exhaust the capacity but do not exceed it."

Carmel Valley has two representatives on the committee among the seven task force members and seven alternates. Glen Chang, a former member of the Carmel Valley Property Association board of directors, is the Sierra Club representative on the panel. Her alternate is Don Harrison, another former CVPOA board member.

Maintaining special quality for Carmel Bay is expensive

STATE WATER QUALITY officials want the Carmel Sanitary District to stop all wastewater disposal in Carmel Bay during the summer.

It is a decision that will cost taxpayers $3 million in construction costs. Customers of the district will have to pay an additional $110,000 in annual operating expenses once a water reclamation system is in operation.

Engineers for the district estimate reclamation will raise sewer service fees as much as $4 per month.

Interested members of the public will have a chance to comment on the reclamation plan and its costs at a public hearing on Tuesday, March 27, at 7:30 p.m., in the Sunset Center Auditorium, Ninth and San Carlos, Carmel.

Construction of the system for use of wastewater to irrigate Pebble Beach golf courses and ship excess water for disposal in Monterey Bay will cost $13.73 million, according to the environmental impact report prepared for the project.

Annual operating costs to the district would be $745,000 per year. But one-third the cost can be defrayed if the district earns $185,000 per year by selling the treated wastewater to the golf course.

Local customers would pay the net operating cost of $560,000 per year and the local construction cost share of $2,080,000. The remaining construction expenses would be paid by federal and state taxpayers through clean water grants to the Carmel district.

THE ENTIRE RECLAMATION PROGRAM is necessary because Carmel Bay was declared an Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS) in 1975 by the state Water Quality Control Board.

Effluent discharge from a sanitary district is banned in an ASBS. The Carmel district received a special dispensation from the state water board last June which permits wintertime use of its ocean outfall line if it reclaims water in the summer.

Eventually, both winter and summer discharge will be banned.

The district board of directors was hoping to get another waiver of the strict ASBS restrictions to permit limited ocean discharge in the summer. In that case, there would be no need for a pipeline to carry Carmel sewage to Monterey Bay.

All wastewater in the summer would be discharged either onto the golf courses or in Carmel Bay.

That alternative would have cost only $10.62 million to construct and a net of $435,000 to operate once reclaimed water was sold.

But at a meeting with district officials early last month, the summer discharge alternative was rejected outright.

According to Jim Nicholas of the state water board staff, "It doesn't go far enough."

The state and federal grants available to Carmel for the project are contingent upon improving water quality in Carmel Bay, and not by reclaiming as much water as possible at the lowest cost, Nicholas said.

"The board acknowledged that it would like to see reclamation done there," he said. "But the main purpose is to get effluent out of Carmel Bay."

THE NECESSITY FOR cleaning up the bay has been a point of contention among Carmel district board members and their counterparts in the Pebble Beach Sanitary District. Pebble Beach is a one-third partner in the Carmel district plant, although the Carmel board makes all the decisions regarding the sewage treatment program.

Two Carmel board members—Jim Pruitt and Ted Weller—have fought the ASBS from the beginning. They claim there is no reason to halt ocean outfall into the bay because it is not harming plant or animal life there.

While both men say they want the district to reclaim water, they believe the present proposal is too expensive for the reclamation benefits received.

Pruitt and Weller, along with all five members of the Pebble Beach board, want to have the ASBS designation lifted. Then, they say, the district can maintain its outfall line and plan for reclamation in an orderly manner.

But the controlling votes belong to the three-member majority of the Carmel board: Ken McGinnis, Charlotte Hurst and Vernon Head.

They contend there is public support for the ASBS; that reclamation is long overdue on the water-short Monterey Peninsula; and that the district might not be able to continue its outfall line even if the ASBS is lifted. The presence of an ASBS at Point Lobos and other environmental protections on Carmel Bay could mean the outfall line would have to be replaced in any case.

According to Bill Anderson of Kennedy Engineers, project engineer on the reclamation program, district customers will pay only an additional $6 to $48 a year for reclamation than they would if the outfall line remained untouched.

An increasing number of customers in the Carmel and Pebble Beach districts—9,000 today increasing to 10,000 by 1983—would keep the per-household cost to Carmel customers at $7 a month in 1983, he said. Customers now pay $6 a month in addition to some property taxes. Property tax revenue will be eliminated and replaced by a user charge in the coming tax year.

Additional costs for reclamation would come from higher operating expenses and payments on the construction loan.

About 20 percent of the cost of the reclamation program would go for improvements needed in the existing treatment plant under any circumstances, Anderson said.

But the district would not be able to get federal and state grant money for those improvements if they weren't part of a package that includes getting the district outfall line out of Carmel Bay.

They include improving the sewer pump station so it would not overflow into the Carmel River during power failures (as happened on Feb. 2) or during periods of high flow during rainy weather; and installing additional treatment facilities at the plant.

The reclamation project would recover 335 million gallons of water per year for reuse on Pebble Beach golf courses as irrigation water.

The EIR estimates that this addition to the Monterey Peninsula Water Supply could accommodate up to 6,400 new residents in the Cal-Am service area.

Wastewater from Carmel would be piped to storage tanks on golf courses in the Del Monte Forest and used to irrigate the courses. The pipeline would continue on to Pacific Grove, where it would connect with the Monterey Regional County Sanitation District system. After going through treatment again in the proposed regional plant, the effluent would be disposed of in Monterey Bay.

Monterey Bay is not an ASBS and can receive treated sewage through an ocean outfall line.

The new system could be in operation by either May 1982 or May 1983, according to the EIR.

Sanitary District will not annex Carmel Valley-yet

By KEN PETERSON

THE CARMEL SANITARY District board will not consider annexing Carmel Valley to its service area until it learns in June what facilities are needed to serve the Valley.

The directors voted 5-0 last Thursday to delay action on the matter and inform Monterey County officials of the decision.

The Carmel Sanitary District is considered the lead agency for sewage treatment planning in both the Valley and Carmel Highlands by state water quality officials.

Because of this, Monterey County now requires any development using a sewage disposal system, other than individual septic tanks, to apply for annexation to the district.

In recent months, the county has told the developers of the Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge, Carmel Valley Ranch and the Village Greens condominium project to apply. The Odello family sought annexation to serve proposed development of their property on the east side of Highway 1.

Only the Marriott and the Odello applications actually came before the district board, but both were turned down because of a ban on new annexations imposed by the board in 1976. That ban is still being enforced. The board tabled a motion last Thursday to lift the ban until it reviews the Carmel Valley annexation issue this summer.

The county has said it will permit creation of new, small sewer service areas for individual developments if the Carmel district does not annex them and take charge of sewage treatment.

DIRECTOR JIM PRUITT said all this should wait until the Areawide Facilities Plan is completed in June. The plan will analyze potential sewage treatment needs for the Valley, the Highlands and the existing district. It will also outline what new facilities would have to be constructed to meet those needs.

"It is not wise for the district to make any moves that are binding until we've looked at that," said Director Jim Pruitt. "I don't like the county trying to end-run us" by approving sewage treatment systems for individual projects before the district has time to look at an overall plan.

"They could be forcing us into something when we may not feel that it is the answer," he said.

Pruitt said the board should make a decision on annexations in July, when it has had a chance to review the facilities plan.

Director Ted Weller expressed strong reservations about package plants and community septic tank systems serving condominiums and apartments.

"Say it fails," he said. "Where do they go?"

"Sooner or later, we're going to have to annex that Valley if we want any control of it," Weller said. "Otherwise, we're in left field with Salinas telling us to run a package plant they let come in."

Pruitt said it might eventually be best for the district to run a sewer main up the Valley large enough to accommodate future customers rather than relying on individual package plants.

Weller said existing developments, like the Mid Valley Shopping Center and apartments, Carmel Valley Manor and the Tierra Grande subdivision all will need sewer service. He envisions their present septic tank systems failing over a period of years.

"We should size the pipe to the point where we could take (them) in when it makes sense for them to come in," Pruitt said.

THIS IS EXACTLY a contingency the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association board voted to oppose at its meeting Wednesday night.

Jeff Stiles, a CVPOA member and former sanitary engineer, told the sanitary district directors his organization does not want Carmel Valley to be annexed.

"People in the Valley are very concerned about the possible construction of waste treatment facilities in Carmel Valley," he said.

He argued before the CVPOA board that restricting the Valley to septic tanks "will keep the population down. If it is sewer, we could have two or three times the population."

Sanitary district directors decided not to consider new annexations at this time because they still have no additional treatment capacity at the district plant.

The plant has a rated capacity of 2.4 million gallons of sewage per day. When they voted for the annexation ban in 1976, the Carmel board determined what capacity remains would be needed to serve potential customers already within the district.

Under an agreement between the Carmel and Pebble Beach sanitary districts, Carmel has rights to two-thirds of the plant capacity and Pebble Beach to one-third.

The boards are negotiating for Pebble Beach to sell back some of its share to Carmel. If that deal goes through, new annexations would be possible to the Carmel district using the extra treatment capacity not used by Pebble Beach.

Valley needs more commercial land, panel says

Carmel Valley needs more property for general commercial uses, the master plan committee decided last Thursday.

The committee agreed to recommend rezoning the seven-acre Kaminske property on the east side of the Mid-Valley Shopping Center for contractors' yards and similar commercial uses. It also said other areas around the Valley should be considered for rezoning to the C-2 category if suitable sites can be found.

General commercial areas allow for plumbers, painters, construction firms and similar businesses to run their operations there. The main commercial zone in the Valley, the C-1 category, permits only retail businesses.

The master plan committee will study two other sites at Mid-Valley for C-2 rezoning. The first site is the property now used for a sand and gravel extraction business on the Carmel River at Robinson Canyon Road. The second site is 20 acres of land behind the old Berwick barn immediately west of the Mid-Valley Shopping Center.

The restrictions placed by the committee on new general commercial areas is that they have low visibility, are unobtrusive and have safe access, generate little noise that would disturb surrounding neighborhoods, and conform to all other master plan policies.

On the issue of motels, the committee agreed after a long discussion to recommend that motels around Carmel Valley Village not grow too large for the general character of the area.

The decision will affect the Los Laureles Lodge, Carmel Valley Inn, Carmel Country Spa and the Barbara Mark property.

The committee voted a week earlier to permit 300 new motel rooms in the Valley east of the Rancho Canada Golf Course, without specifying where the additional units would go.

The new policy statement encourages spreading out the units among several motels rather than concentrating them in large motel projects.

The opposing argument rejected by the committee is that smaller motels are not viable economic units and that motels of 50 to 80 units should be encouraged.

At the meeting, committee member Mel Steckler expanded on arguments he presented a week earlier opposing major new motel development at the entrance to the Valley. The committee agreed to limit expansion to the area between the Carmel River, Highway 1, Carmel Valley Road and the western edge of Rancho Canada Golf Course. This limits potential additional expansion at Rio Road Motel to 82 units beyond the recently approved 45-room facility.

Steckler pointed out that the shopping area along Highway 1 in the Lower Valley is a regional commercial center for local residents from Carmel Valley, Carmel, Big Sur and Monterey.

Continued motel and hotel development in the area would gradually convert the center to a tourist-oriented business, he asserted.

The Monterey County Planning Commission ordered an environmental impact report on plans to create a series of small retail shops and restaurants adjacent to Long's Drugs on Rio Road. Commissioner William Peters said at the time that existing development plans for the property—which call for one or two large stores and a few smaller businesses—may serve the needs of local residents better than small shops.
